Techniques of minimum tillage noted

By KENDACE BORRY

LANCASTER – Today more and more farmers are trying minimum tillage. The practice is used for its ability to save time, fuel, and soil. Every farmer can see his fuel and time is saved, but it takes a closer look at the fields to notice the long-range erosion-stopping process.

The practice of leaving the crop residues on the soil surface to protect it from the erosion factors of rain and wind is known as conservation tillage. It has the potential of being an excellent erosion control measure for use on cropland.

But how good a system of minimum tillage is depends directly on how much crop residue is left on the soil surface after planting. The

Careers available in ag education

Editor's Note: The following is the first in a two part story on career opportunities in agriculture education. This week's article deals with the opportunities in the field. Next week's story will include personal interviews with vo ag instructors.

LITITZ – In an age when the skyrocketing price of land and equipment as well as spiraling rates of interest make it nearly impossible for a young adult to go into farming, many agriculture oriented individuals are wondering just where their niche in this field of endeavor will be. Foreign land purchases arouse U.S.

WASHINGTON – Foreign investments in American farm land are arousing suspicion among U.S. farm groups and members of Congress. Both the National Farmers Union and American Farm Bureau Federation have voiced concern, testifying at congressional hearings that are looking into the matter. Meanwhile, Congressman Robert Walker of Lancaster, Pa. has introduced a bill in the House to require registration of agricultural transactions involving foreigners.

Ironically, while this is going on, the U.S. Senate is nearing a vote on a treaty which will make it easier for foreigners to buy U.S. farms. The legislation is known as the United Kingdom Tax

Farm bill waiting on President

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Legislation giving the Secretary of Agriculture the authority to increase target prices for wheat, feed grains, and cotton, whenever a set-aside is in effect for any of these crops has been approved and passed by both the Senate and the House. The bill has been sent to the President's desk who has until May 17 to act on it.

The bill also sets a minimum price support loan for upland cotton of 48 cents per pound.

The Senate action, on a voice vote, approved the second effort by a House-Senate conference to write emergency farm legislation. The first conference report was approved by the Senate on April 10 but was defeated in the House on April 12.

The second conference

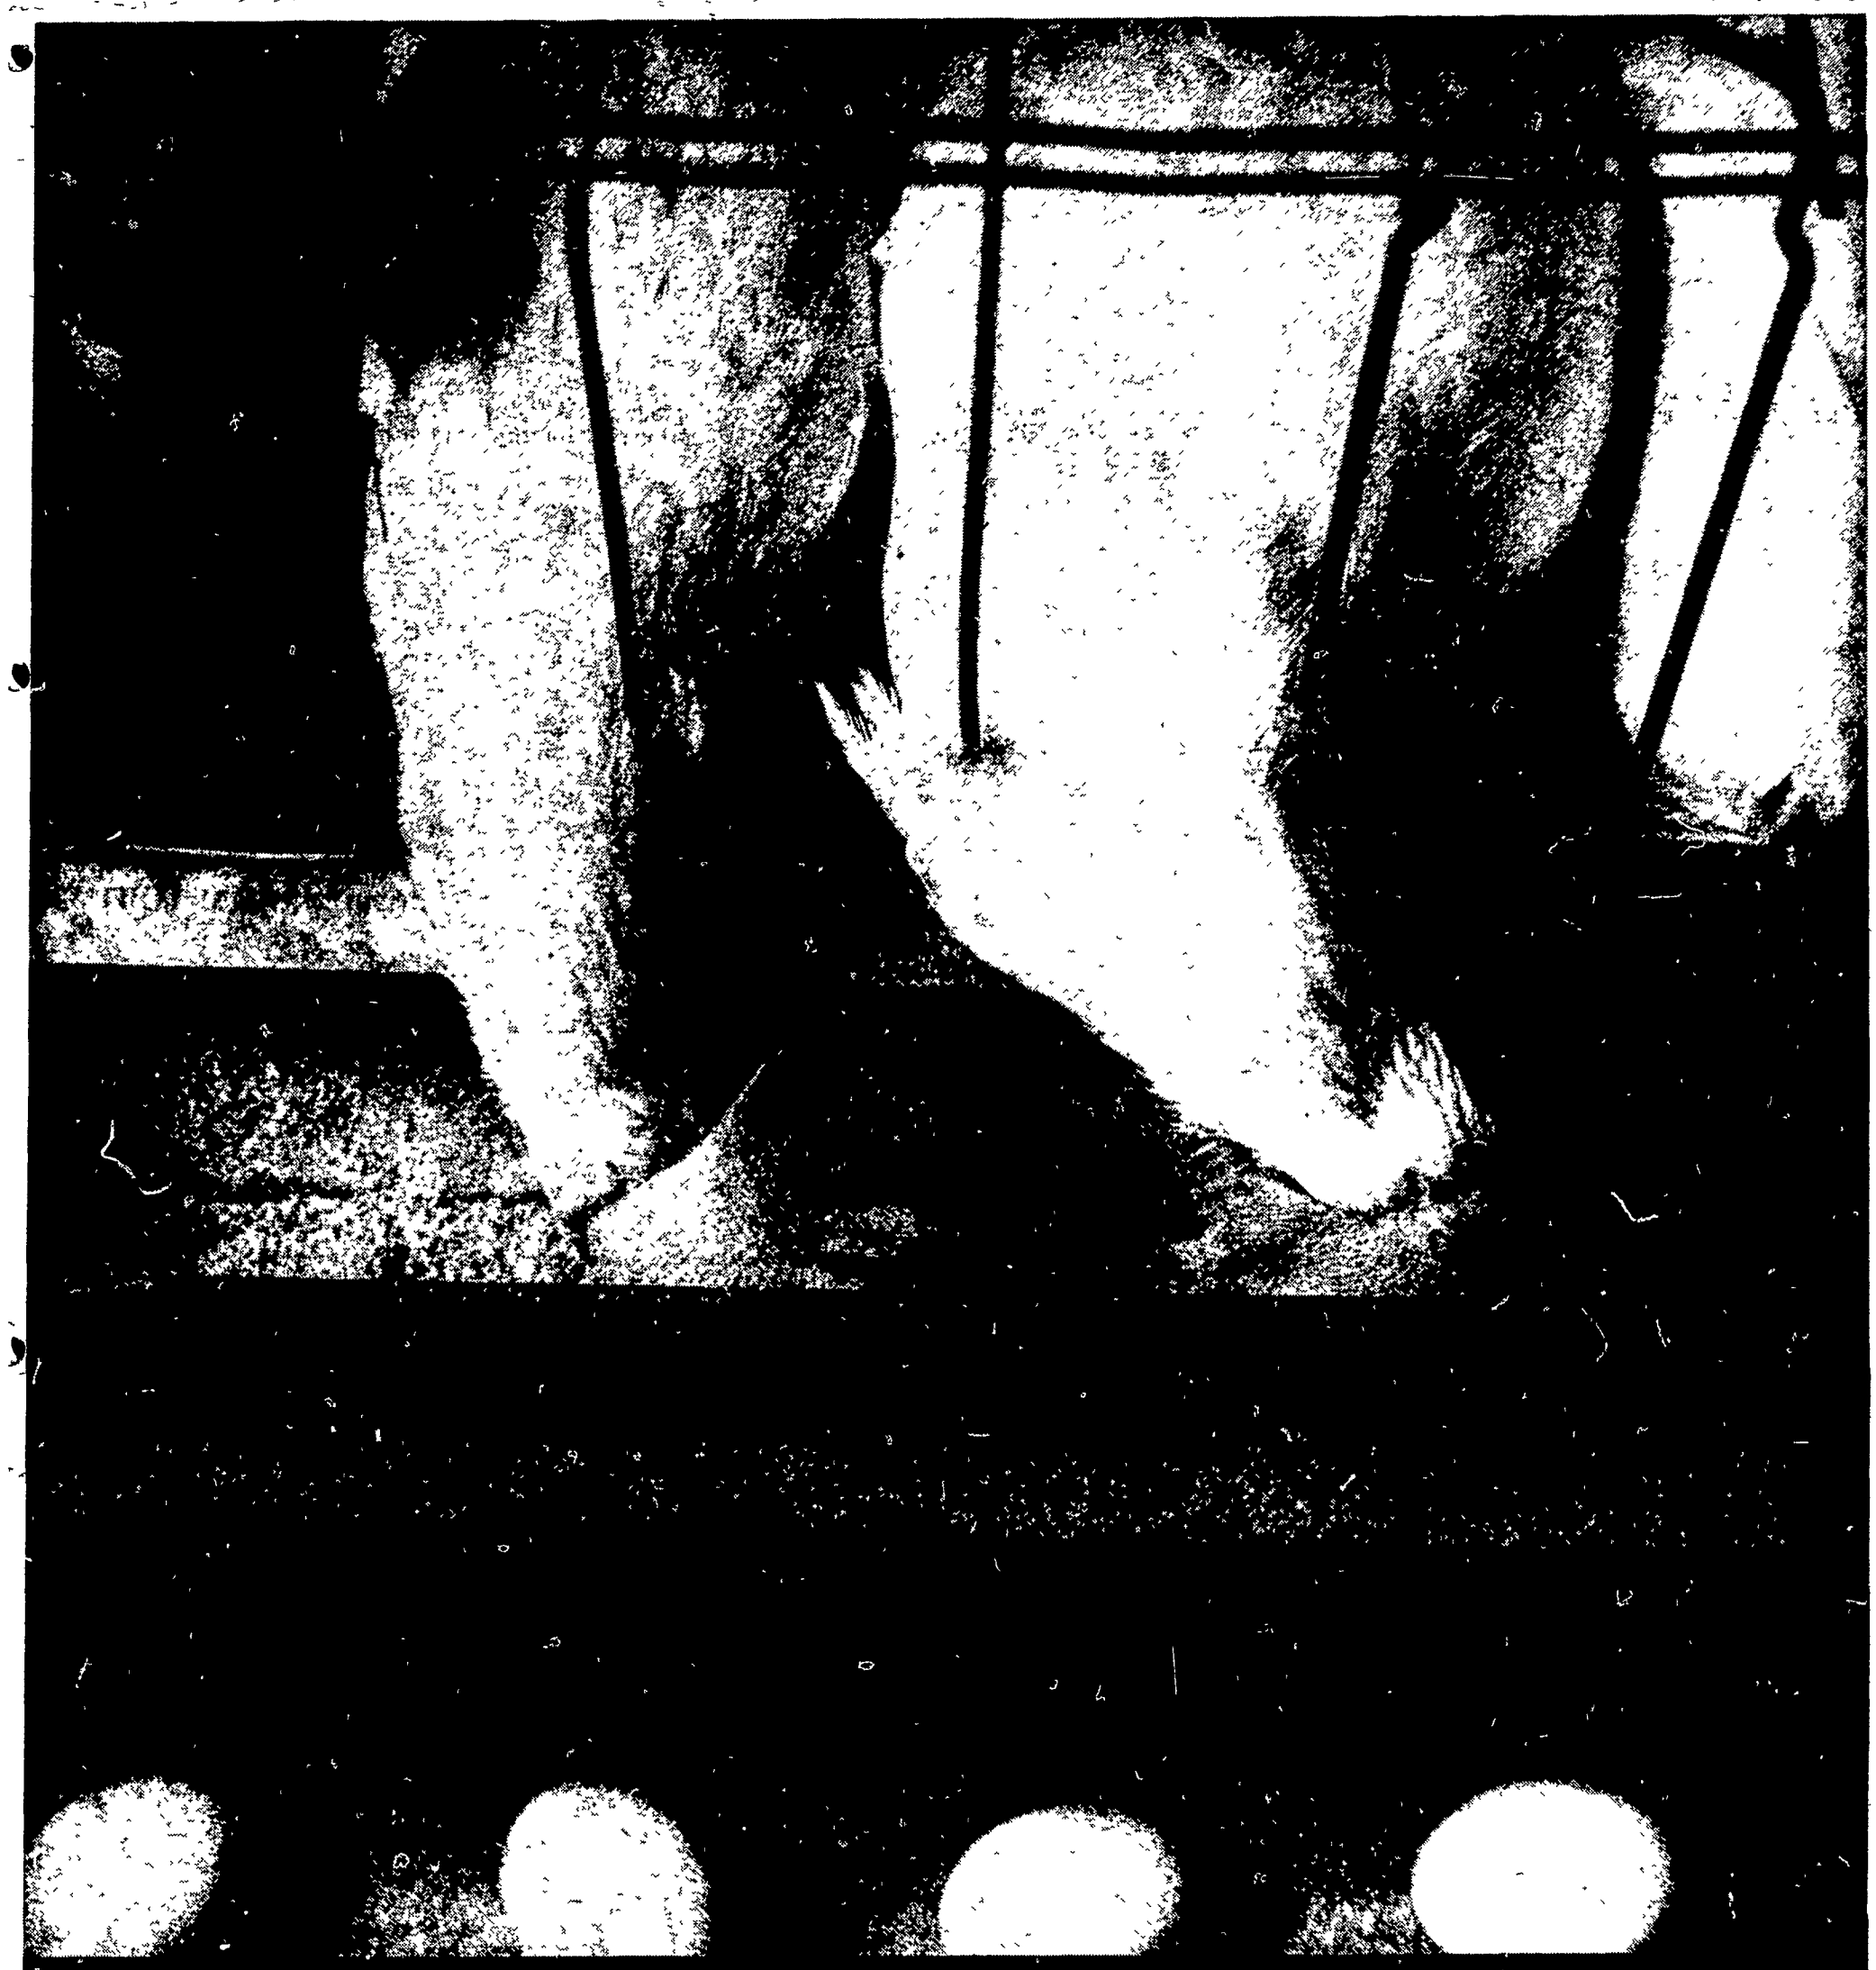
RD4 EPHRATA, PA. 17522
1 MILE NORTH OF EPHRATA ON NORTH STATE ST.



From chick to cage, we formulate feeds and feeding programs with your profit in mind.

Do you have an open mind?

Are you ready to devote an hour or two of your time planning for a more profitable future?

If your answer to both questions is yes, you owe it to yourself to read what we have to say.

Unlike many other feed companies, we develop custom feeding programs for each individual operation.

It all starts with a Pennfield man reviewing your operation with you. Your goals. Your records. The health and overall condition of your birds. Whether you grow chicks or buy started pullets. The type of equipment you use. The production potential of your flock. Your management practices. And other factors that have an effect on your profit potential.

With the aid of computers, we then design a feeding program specifically tailored to your birds needs—a program that can improve your profits by reducing expenses, increasing production, or both.

For example, when we recommended producers switch from a competitive 18% protein feed to an optimum-nutrient density Pennfield feed, there was no loss in production—and this one recommendation has saved as much as $12,000 a year depending on flock size.

There is no cost—or obligation—for this unique service. But you must take the first step by writing or phoning us. Do it today.

We don't recommend intentionally testing your layers' forgivability. But here's one flock that was out of water three times, the first for two full days! It bounced back again to 8% above the projected line!

The insurance package for your next laying flock should start with your purchase of DEKALB XL-Links from Moyer's Chicks, Inc.

What were ironclads? R L , Dubuque, Iowa

The "ironclad" man-of-war was introduced at about this time The term was catchy and probably attached to many things — we suggest crusty biscuits, often baked for breakfast Yes, such meals were starchy and the folks that ate 'em were starchy too

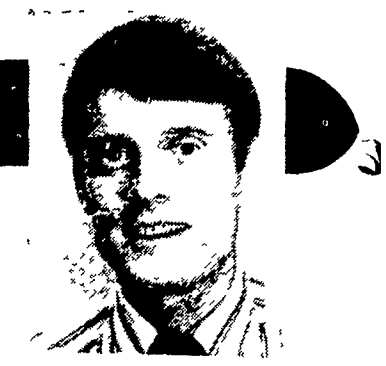
EDITORIAL COMMENTS By DIETER KRIEG, EDITOR



Guard yourself against bad business

There is at least one farmer in Pennsylvania who lost an estimated $200,000 in his farming operation earlier this year because he had too much trust in the people he was dealing with. Fortunately, after weeks of anguish and frustration, conditions turned around and his losses were comparatively minimal.

Farmers who aren't careful in their business transactions leave themselves wide open for "plucking" by unscrupulous salesmen. It's a perennial problem. Just a couple of weeks ago, for example, Pennsylvania's Department of Agriculture put out a statement cautioning farmers about the purchase of "miracle products." Every year it seems like someone has something to peddle that sounds too good to be true. And that's just the trouble sometimes -- it isn't true. The farmer spent his money and is left holding the proverbial empty bag.

Whether buying or selling, farmers should know beforehand who they're dealing with. It might be very wise in the long run to treat strangers and over-the-phone-offers with suspicion. The commonly recommended advice is to do a little checking on the strange buyer or seller who's approaching you Even then, you can't be sure. In a way it's like the wild animal trainer in a circus having a half-dozen tigers before him. The question always remains: When will one of them strike The best method of defense is to be costantly alert and cautious.

When in doubt about making either a purchase or a sale, ask the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture to give you an evaluation of the individual's or company's integrity and reputation Be especially careful when dealing with individuals or companies outside of your state.

Probably every farmer in Pennsylvania has heard about the "fly-by-night outfits" who offered to paint barns and barn roofs at really bargain prices. Of course, what the unsuspecting farmers in that case didn't know was that the paint came off after a good rain or two.

There are lots of people in this world who are out to make a fast and easy buck. Farmers are among their targets

On some products the farmer buys, for example, the farmer could actually face a double and triple loss First he spends money on a product which is worthless. Secondly, he hurts his production because the product he ended up buying isn't doing what he thought it would.

Despite all the laws that are on the books, and the state and federal agencies that are supposed to watch out for us, the farmer-businessman himself is the best line of defense He's got to be careful in his every business transaction if he wants to avoid being taken for a nightmarish ride.

Mothers are special people

Mothers are wonderful people with the most noble of responsibilities. Truly, we couldn't live without them. Warm and comforting, loving and thoughtful, they guide their children and husbands throughout life. From near and far, they glow with special qualities which only mothers are blessed with.

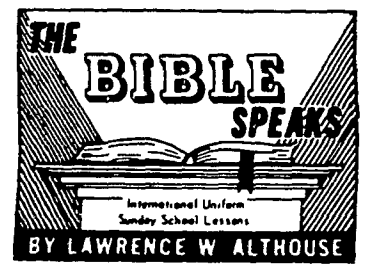
My mother is a perfect example of what I'm talking about. She is the kind of person who has always been busy with housework and calf-feedings, but she's never been too busy to have time for those she loves. She raised five children under some of the most trying circumstances, including hiding in a field with her first-born while invading Russian troops searched the farm.

She used to walk a half-mile to a bus, go to town, and come back with bags full of groceries for a family of seven. She saved every penny that she could.

My mother's concern has always been greatest for her family. But she's just as devoted to her work -- especially the calves she feeds daily. She has raised a couple thousand of them in the past 19 years.

A bird fallen out of its nest has a good home once my mother finds it. There's food for a stray dog, too. And flowers, shrubbery, trees, and many of God's other creations always receive the best of dedicated attention and care.

Mothers are truly special people They mean so much to the world around them, even we don't always realize it.



THREE VISIONS

Lesson for May 14, 1978

Background Scripture:
Acts 10.

Devotional Reading:
1 Corinthians 1:18-25.

The story of Simon Peter and Cornelius the Centurian is a tale of three visions.

The first of these was the vision that came to Cornelius while he was praying. Luke tells us that he was a Roman officer, commander of a unit of 100 men from the Italian mainland. Cornelius was stationed at Caesarea, a coastal city that became the Roman capitol of Judea. Furthermore, he was "a devout man who feared God," a term often applied to Gentiles (non-Jews) who adopted Jewish religious ideas and attended the synagogues without going so far as receiving circumcision and becoming full proselytes.

Praying constantly

Cornelius was a man who took religion seriously and, as Luke puts it, "prayed constantly." It is in the midst of praying one day that he sees a vision. The vision is a reassurance that God has heard his prayers and also an instruction to send someone to bring Simon Peter to his household. Cornelius was not only a devout man, he was also obedient and he does as he is told.

The second vision takes place while Cornelius' messengers are on their way to Joppa. Having ascended to the rooftop of the house of Tanner to pray, Peter falls into a trance. In the vision the hungry man is instructed to kill and eat some of the creatures he sees, but Peter refuses because some of the animals are forbidden as food by the Jewish law. But the vision's voice commands him: "What God has cleansed you must not call common" (10:15).

Truly I perceive!

While Peter is still trying to understand the meaning of his vision, the messengers arrive We cannot tell whether he realizes immediately what the vision means, but even his decision to go with the messengers was a breakthrough, for Jewish law forbade all but the most necessary contacts with Gentiles who like the animals in Peter's vision were thought to be "unclean" in a spiritual sense.

So Peter goes to Caesarea and meets Cornelius and each shares his vision with the other. Peter must have been somewhat amazed that God would reveal himself to a Gentile in a vision and he must have been equally overwhelmed with the attitude he found: "Now therefore we are all present here in the sight of God, to hear all that you have been commanded by the Lord" (10:33).

By means of this experience the doors of the church were opened wide to the Gentile as well as the Jew, a development that profoundly affected the whole course of Christianity.

NOW IS THE TIME

TO CONTROL MULTIFLORA ROSE

The highly promoted wild rose bush of more than a decade ago is now getting to be a nuisance in too many places. The Multiflora Rose once strongly promoted by the Soil Conservation Service and the Pennsylvania Game Commission is getting out of hand on too many farms. This is especially true in pasture land and in woodlots. We suggest that land owners get on the job and control this wild rose at this time. The best known treatment as of this time is to treat the bushes with Tordon 10K pellets; maximum control can be expected when the plants are growing rapidly and in bloom. A Certification Card is required before the material can be purchased. Extension Agents are in a position to instruct folks in the use of pellets and issue to card. Don't let Multiflora Rose take over part of your farm.

TO BE ALERT FOR ALFALFA WEEVIL

We are not expecting a very heavy infestation of alfalfa weevil this spring; however, growers should be on the alert and inspect their fields weekly to evaluate the problem. The weather has been cool and after a severe winter, we could easily get by this year without much trouble. However, when infestation reaches more than half of the plants, and not in the bud stage, some insecticide may be needed for protection. The Agronomy Guide will give additional details for Pennsylvania growers. In recent years, some growers have found some infestation at cutting time; under these conditions it is suggested that the field be sprayed immediately after the first cutting is removed. This will prevent the small worms from eating the second growth.

TO COMBAT GYPSY MOTH

Property owners in northern and eastern Lancaster County, and all points north and east, can be expecting the small gypsy moth worms to be appearing at any time. Mid-May is the normal time for them to start blowing around and eating foliage. We suggest that home owners get prepared to protect their favorite oak shade trees, because the gypsy moth like them also. Sprays of Sevin, Orthene, or Imidan will kill the worms that are present. Repeated sprays are needed in order to give any length to the protection. Owners of woodlots may want to secure commercial sprayers that operate from the air. Eradication of gypsy moth is very difficult; however, some protection to private shade trees is possible with repeat applications.

ANNOUNCING AN

ECONOMICAL SOIL FERTILITY MEETING

Place: Blue Ball Fire Hall, Intersection of Rt. 322 & 23, Lancaster County, Pa.
Time: Wednesday, May 24, 1978 at 1:00 P.M. and 7:30 P.M.

Dealer and distributor applicants can get details in the intermission period They are welcome because the country desperately needs the help that Agrispon can give rather than going to Uncle Sam who is also broke The Agrispon Company president plans to be here and some other speakers with experience and natural soil fertility knowledge. There is much to learn about soil and disease prevention We may be able to get a certain out of state vet who is good in understanding the relationship between soil and animal disease WATCH NEXT WEEK'S AD!

Agrispon fertility draws plenty nitrogen out of the air for a heavy crop and releases phosphorus and pot ash that was formally unavailable How do we know? By soil analysis and the proof of the pudding is in the yielding. $6.50 worth (actually worth much more) out produced 800 lbs. fertilizer on corn, Cambell soup vegetable experiment and others.

AFTER PLANTING is a good time to apply Agrispon and Soil Conditioner. We at ORGANIC CENTER are dedicated to help farmers prepare for survivial when oil and fertilizer prices will inflate still more and pestilences get worse. If you or your son want to be a Future Farmer of America, you had better prepare ahead Our good products help both ways and not just a little. If you knew the advantages you would change. Come to the meeting and learn.

SOIL CONDITIONER works very well with AGRISPON and costs only $2.70 an acre. It opens up the soil quickly in a few months or weeks down deep for water holding capacity like a sponge, and root penetration to go down and get the water in that sponge. Think of the potential in a drought! And it breaks the hard pan quickly under a swamp so it can drain, often times in half a week. It has good reasons for selling fast like it does AGRISPON is a live product and provides life to the soil, producing quality crops with much nutrition. It has one function, SOIL CONDITIONER has another. They blend well.

HUGE VEGETABLE MARKETS are within 100 miles. A big wholesaler at Trenton would love to come and pick it up if we had a steady supply and quality. Let us show him what Agrispon can do this year for a big market next year You should practice growing because Northeastern produce will suddenly become in great demand because of distribution problems Thousands of farmers will then wish they had a crop of vegetables to sell and the city folks will also wish it "I was hungry and ye gave me no food," Matt 25 We want to take your produce to the tail gate market in Phila 4 days a week, starting in July. Organic will get preference but need not be exclusive But a much greater market exists if farmers would work together We will invite the produce buyers to be at the meeting to talk with veg. growers in the intermission period between the 1 o'clock and 7 30 sessions, lets say 3 30. Here is your opportunity if you have children In the soon coming crash factories will go broke and people will not need luxuries, but they will have to eat to live, regardless if gas is too high priced for trucks to go to Calif The world situation is different from 1929. In the next crash food will be at a premium before it is all over At least prepare to feed the people.

We sell solar food dryers for $39 95 and $116 95 depending on size Don't depend on the deep freeze We never know what will happen

You save money, day after day, with corn-soy and Vigortone.

Want to save money on your swine rations? When you take charge of ration content and quality, you start saving from the very first day.

To take charge of ration content, buy only what you don't grow on your own farm. Then, grind and mix the rations yourself — fresh — from pre-starter through finishing. You'll never have to worry about freshness again. Better yet, these steps alone eliminate several middle-man costs and handling fees.

To take charge of ration quality, follow Vigortone fortified corn-soy feeding programs Vigortone swine pre-mixes assure that your rations always contain proper levels of major minerals, trace elements, vitamins, and other nutrients. In addition, corn-soy and Vigortone furnish the right level and balance of all essential amino acids.

This simple approach keeps your out-of-pocket feed costs low. What's more, it actually promotes better feed conversion for lower cost of gain.

Your figures will prove it.

Now is the time to compare.
See your Vigortone dealer soon. He's ready to compare the performance of Vigortone's low-cost swine feeding programs with any other you name.

Demand was good throughout the period as most buying interests came into the week with minimal live inventories on hand were in need of cattle for immediate requirements. Weekend rains over the trade territory again affected early movement. But supplies were well distributed over the trading period. The upsurge in live prices was supported by sharp advances on carcass beef at the wholesale level. Feeders buyers were fairly aggressive for 950-1050 lb. two way steers. Slaughter steers made up approximately 49%, heifers 33%, cows 10% and feeders 6%.

Angus bull sells for $115,000

QUEENSTOWN, Md. – Some called it the end of a dynasty, others said it was the end of an era in Angus breeding. But, the owner and managers of the Wye Angus herd saw the Wye Plantation Bull Sale as just a sidebar in the ongoing history of the world famous beef cattle breeding herd.

On January 20 of this year, Arthur A. Houghton, Jr. chairman of Steuben Glass and director of Corning Glass Works, both located in Corning, N.Y. made a gift of his herd to the University of Maryland at College Park in order that the integrity of the herd would continue.

The cattle that the college did not select for breeding purposes was then slated to be sold at auction. On Monday, May 8 that auction was held with a grand total of $932,700 taken in for 115 bulls in a six-hour-long sale. No females were sold.

The highest selling bull was Contact of Wye, a 5-year-old herd sire which sold for $115,000. The animal was jointly purchased by Picket Fence Farm, Grays Lake, Ill., and Lincoln Land Angus Farm, Fisher, Ill.

At $100,000 Franchester of Wye, another herd sire, was the second highest priced animal. The bull was purchased by Daniel Minchew, Esta Valley Farms, Washington, D.C.

Favour of Wye was the third highest priced bull at $65,000. He was sold to Newport Farms Syndicate, Berlin, Md.

The average per bull was $8,110 with animals purchased by breeders from 30 states and Canada. The state of Virginia was the destined home for the most number of animals with 25 bulls sold to breeders from that state at a total of $93,000. In all, 1500 individuals turned out for the sale.

The proceeds from the sale will go to the University of Maryland for development of a research program.

Leftover flower and garden seeds can be used later in the year, or even next spring, if they are properly stored; dry quarters away from any spray materials (especially weed killers) is suggested. They should be stored in the original containers in order to keep identity. Also, keep them away from pets, children, and livestock.

xxx

Crabgrass control continues to be very difficult in many lawn and turf areas. This is a very aggressive weed that takes over during late summer and fall; in the spring the plants are dead and the area needs re-seeding or re-sodding. Crabgrass plants grow from seeds each summer; the best control method is to treat the area with a pre-emergence crabgrass control weed killer; this can be bought mixed with fertilizer, or used as a spray. The time of application is mid to late April when the forsythia blossoms are falling to the ground. Several applications may be needed over a period of years in order to get good control. Next summer every effort should be made to keep the plants from going to seed. As long as new seeds are allowed to develop and blow over the area, control will be more difficult. Act now to control crabgrass later this summer.

Aamodt gets famous support

LANCASTER – Gloria Swanson, famed movie personality who has been buying meat from Norman O. Aamodt's farm for six years, was in town Thursday evening to help boost Aamodt's chances in the congressional primary. It's the first time since 1964 that she went out of her way to promote a candidate for political office. The last beneficiary of her efforts was Barry Goldwater, Republican senator from Arizona who ran for president against Lyndon Johnson 14 years ago.

Aamodt, a Chester County farmer and engineer who is challenging incumbent Congressman Robert Walker in the Republican primary on Tuesday, had Miss Swanson as a guest speaker at a $25-a-plate fund-raising dinner held here at the Landis Valley Resort Inn. Topics of conversation centered on both farming and food, for which Aamodt and Miss Swanson shared considerable concern.

Norman Aamodt

Aamodt, who is now regarded as a strong challenger to Walker, is concerned about farm land preservation, fair taxation, the moral fibre of the nation, energy questions, education and a host of other issues.

Miss Swanson, 80, told a group of close to 200 persons that "In Washington we need people who are concerned about the soil, the water and air."

She considers Norman Aamodt to be the kind of man who has a genuine interest and concern on such matters.

Dairy princess reaches peak of her reign

Sandy Miller, Pennsylvania's dairy princess, passes out the facts of milk to school children, one of many responsibilities her job entails.

By LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

HAMBURG – "This has really been a change," reflected 20 year old Sandy Miller, as she discussed her role as Pennsylvania's dairy princess. "I was always more of a tomboy and never liked any glamour before this," she explained. "It is a tremendous experience, everyone is behind me, encouraging!" she continued with an enthusiastic smile.

Even though the busiest part of her reign has not yet approached, the largest thrust being in June and July, Sandy has spent a great deal of time in her capacity as dairy princess, promoting her industry's products and attending various functions. Already, she has attended several conventions and fairs, been in parades, and has also served as one of the Royal Court for Penn Jersey Harvestore where she got to meet Miss Pennsylvania, Lynn Grote.

Meeting Pennsylvania's secretary of agriculture, Kent Shelhamer, and Lieutenant Governor Kline have also highlighted her experiences. In addition, she is meeting and traveling with the other commodity queens, and dairy princesses from other counties. "But," she added with sincerity, "it's a shame that I don't get to see them more often."

Not only does Sandy serve as Pennsylvania's dairy princess, she also continues to reign as Berks County's dairy princess. In this capacity, Sandy visits primarily second grade classes throughout the county, teaching the children where milk comes from and why it is so important that they drink it. "I like to give an informal presentation to individual classes," explained Sandy, this way she feels they are more attentive and learn more than if a program was presented before them as a large audience. "There is more inter-action and communication in smaller groups," she added, "and it is where I find the most fun." "I especially enjoy the thank-you letters they send me in return."

Sandy is employed by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Miller, Hamburg R2, on their dairy farm where she has helped out with chores since she was nine years old. The Miller's milk approximately 100 Holsteins and farm 600 acres of land with the help of two additional men.

Her primary duties are caring for the calves which Sandy has housed outside in calf hutches. Sandy is very happy with the results she has been getting with the use of these shelters. The calves have been kept outside in the huts over the winter and have had very little sickness, she explained. This active Dairy Princess also helps with the milking when needed and attends to various other jobs such as registering the calves, working in the lawn and garden, and helping with hay making when necessary.

While Sandy was attending college for two years at the State University of New York at Farmingdale, where she earned an associates degree in small animal science, her youngest brother, Todd, now 13, did her chores. Sandy also has another brother, Scott 16, and a sister, Cindy who is 22 years old.

Efforts underway to ease rail car shortage

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has ordered all U.S. Department of Agriculture resources be made available to help ease serious rail car shortages.

Citing these shortages as the "worst in history," Bergland has directed USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service to work closely with officials of the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC) to try to alleviate the worst situations.

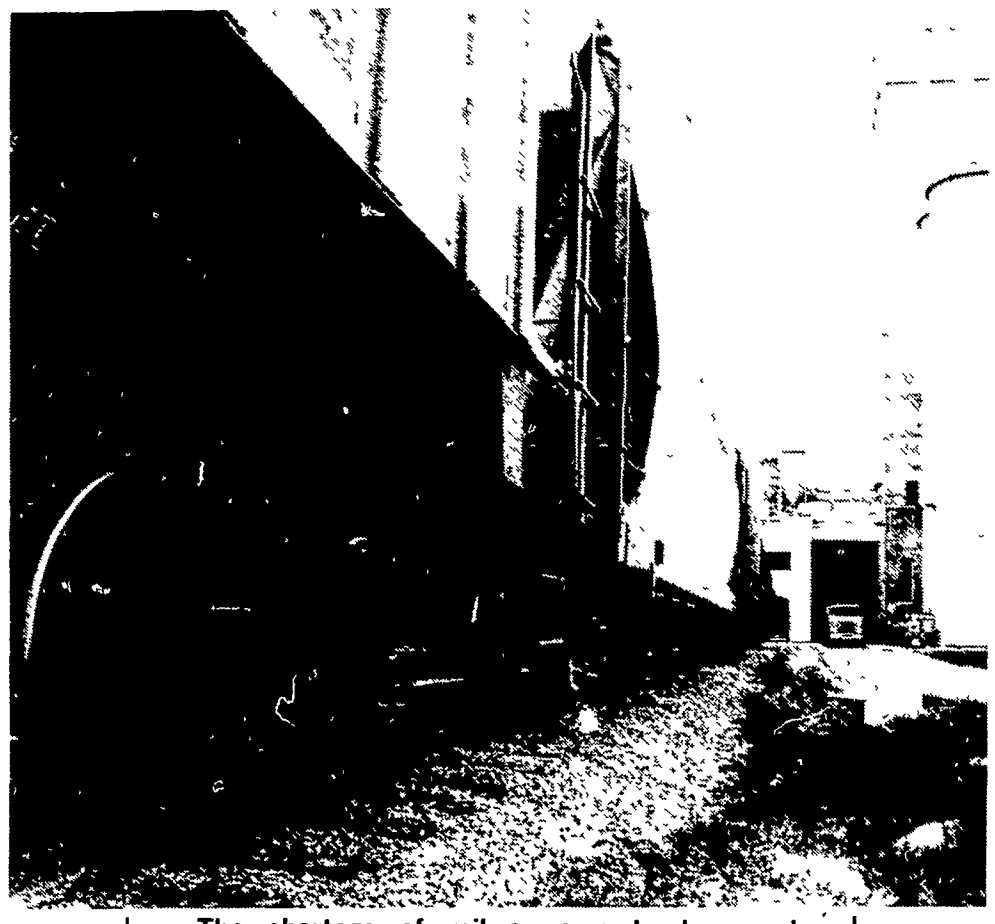
Even though USDA has no statutory authority to solve the shortage problem, Bergland said, ICC officials have all available USDA resources to analyze export sales reports, crop reports, and estimated commercial fertilizer use to help determine the future needs for railroad cars.

Secretary Bergland said a "hot-line" desk has been set up at USDA so shippers, trade associations, and grain elevator operators can alert USDA to serious railcar shortages. The number is (202) 447-6794.

Currently, Mr. Bergland said, the nation's railroads are unable to fill daily orders for more than 33,000 covered hopper cars and nearly 6,000 plain boxcars. Cotton shippers have a two-month delay to receive boxcars; the fertilizer industry reported a shortage of more than 2,000 covered hopper cars for the week of April 24 alone; and all segments of the grain industry have serious difficulties obtaining needed cars.

Bergland said several factors contributed to the shortages, including rail cars stranded by severe winter weather, the 8-½ month-old Pullman strike, and the increase in world demand for U.S. agriculture exports.

"The situation will probably get worse," the secretary said. "The current shortages could extend well into the year and affect a wide variety of commodities."



The shortage of railway cars to transport agricultural goods, especially fertilizer, has not only farmers and agribusinessmen worried. The United States Department of Agriculture is trying to make more rail cars available to agribusiness so that fertilizer and resulting crops can be delivered as needed.

Germans impressed by hard-working farmers

By DIETER KRIEG

LANCASTER – Pennsylvania farmers' willingness and ability to work long and hard is what impressed 42 German visitors most of all when they toured through Lancaster County this week.

Visiting an Amish dairy and poultry farm near Bird-in-Hand, a dairy farm near Manheim, a hog operation near Mount Joy, and a third dairy farm at Peach Bottom, the visitors left each farm with the same impression: farmers in the Garden Spot work very hard. They work so hard, in fact, that the visitors left the area not only impressed, but even wondering how a farm family can possibly have so much motivation.

During and after each visit to a farm, the West Germans openly questioned how difficult it might be for parents to keep their sons and daughters interested in farming under such "heavy" workloads. Some even speculated that the brisk life style of farmers in the area wouldn't allow a man to live past the age of 50.

The West German group was composed of 25 men and 17 women. Nineteen of the 25 men were farmers, two were agents of the Landwirtschaftskammer Schleswig-Holstein (a farmer-run organization simular to our Extension

Raising calves in hutches such as shown in the foreground on Robert Kauffman's farm, Peach Bottom, is unheard of in Germany. Visitors from Schleswig-Holstein needed some convincing that the calf hutch idea gives better results than conventional methods.

Foreign land purchases

Treaty. It reportedly would give foreign investors in U.S. farm land a substantial tax advantage over American farmers, according to spokesmen at the National Farmers Union, here.

In a newsletter released late last week, the NFU says:

Some foreign investors, who operate through tax shelters in the Netherlands Antilles, would be free from income taxation in their own country and in the U.S.; others would enjoy a tax advantage over U.S. farm land owners in the range of 15 to 30 per cent. This advantage would enable them to outbid U.S. citizens in buying farm land.

Debate on that treaty was to have begun this week, Lancaster Farming learned, but it has been postponed until after a vote has been reached on the Labor Reform Bill.

In a newsletter put out recently by the National Farmers Union, Reuben L. Johnson, director of legislative services for the NFU, is quoted as saying:

"It is unfortunate that no one seems to know any more about the land purchases than what they read about them in the newspapers," Johnson said. "It is intolerable that neither the Congress, nor government agencies, nor the general public are able to get at the truth about alien and corporate ownership and operation of U.S. farms."

A federal monitoring program would help the states in supplementing their own data collection programs, in considering the basis for constructive legislation, and in enforcing current statutes on the subject, Johnson stressed.

He reported that Farmers Union spearheaded legislation dealing with alien and corporate farm land ownership in seven states during the past ten years and that seven more states have had such laws or disclosure requirements under consideration during 1977 and 1978.

Farmers Union contended that foreign capital investments in America not only are not needed but, "in fact are disruptive," and tend to inflate land values in the selected areas in which the foreign acquisitions are concentrated.

Johnson indicated further that the $1 billion invested by foreigners in U.S. farm land in 1977 may only be "the tip of the iceberg."

Farmers Union testimony supported a proposed federal monitoring program on foreign investment in American farm land.

The American Farm Bureau, meanwhile, has asked Congress to search for some hard facts on the matter. The AFBF wants an investigation performed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, adding that facts on the situation to date are not clear.

Tevoca FFA chapter honors top achievers

By JOANNE SPAHR

BROWNSTOWN – Felicia Gordner and Darryl Weidman, students at Brownstown Vo-Tech School, each walked away with a handful of awards at the recent honors banquet of the Tevoca Future Farmers of America. Both students are seniors.

Gordner and Weidman represent the two different areas of the Tevoca chapter - the horticulture class and the floriculture group.

Hard work does not go unnoticed in the Tevoca FFA chapter. These four girls were awarded "silver shears" for their industriousness in floriculture during the year. From left, the girls are: Belinda Bottenfield, Cornelia Eder, Sherry Fritz, and Deb Finefrock. Missing from the photo was Judy Brenner.

Miss Gordner, who will be taking part in the state floriculture contest at Penn State in June, took the floriculture foundation award, the Lancaster County Banker's Award, and also took the honor for distinguished achievement in floriculture.

Darryl Weidman will also be competing at Penn State during June activities week. He, however, will be a part of the three-man horticulture team rounded out by Bill Alberte and Bill Veirling.

A third year student at Brownstown, Weidman excelled in a number of areas this year. For his achievements, he earned the Dekalb Award, the County Banker's Award in horticulture, the Star Red Rose Degree, and a gold medal in state record book competition.

In handing Weidman the Dekalb Award, FFA advisor Charles Patterson referred to his student as "a real

Tempers flared in Georgia

ATLANTA, Ga. – When the Georgia Farm Bureau invited striking farmers to a meeting last month to promote better understanding, the strikers showed up, but not without their own demands. They wanted the Georgia Farm Bureau president to resign. When that was refused, they began throwing eggs at the building and at cars, walls, carpeting, and equipment. Directors of the Farm Bureau were also targets and the strikers threatened to dynamite the building. Damages are estimated at several thousand dollars.

Farm bill

bill, agreed to on April 26, was considerably modified from the earlier legislation, which President Carter had threatened to veto had it reached his desk.

In presenting the second conference report, Senator Herman E. Talmadge of Georgia, Chairman of the Senate Comittee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, said in a prepared statement:

"This is a modest bill that provides limited help to the Nation's farmers. It is far short of what I think is needed to restore vitality to the agricultural economy. But it appears to be the best farm legislation attainable under existing circumstances."

The conference report amends the 1977 Farm Act to give the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary authority to increase target prices for wheat, feed grains and upland cotton for the 1978 through 1981 crops whenever a set-aside is in effect for one or more of these crops. Under existing law, the target prices are set by statute and can be adjusted administratively only to reflect increases in production costs.

The Carter Administration has indicated it will use the authority of the new legislation this year only to increase the target price of wheat to $3.40 per bushel. The wheat target price for 1978 is now set at $3.00 or $3.05 per bushel, depending on the size of the crop.

The new legislation also makes technical changes in the formula contained in the 1977 Farm Act for computing the loan level for cotton and sets a minimum loan level of 48 cents per pound. This will amount to a four cent increase in the 1978 loan level for cotton.

The bill would also increase the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation from $14.5 to $25 billion effective October 1, 1978.

In asking Senate approval of the Conference Report, Talmadge said the new legislation will provide greater flexibility in the basic farm law to give the Secretary of Agriculture more authority to deal with farm price and supply problems.

"I hope the Administration will make better use of the tools Congress has provided in the future than it has in the past," Talmadge said.

The House-Senate Conference bill applies to all commodities covered by the target price concept except rice. The same provisions would be extended to rice under an amendment to the Senate version of the Agricultural Credit Bill.

UNIPEL® 13-34-10

fertilizer can get your corn crop off to a super start:

It has a high concentration of water-soluble Phosphorus that gets to young seedlings quickly Helps plants establish a good root system—the starting point for top yields. Its quick-acting and long-lasting Nitrogen team up to feed the young plants for full yield potential, continually from sprouting to harvest.

This is the Starter Special that corn growers know from good experience. It's highly effective as a banded starter. And it's SAFE... no chance of ammonia damage to tender, young seedlings when used as a "pop up" and applied directly with the seed at 50 lbs./acre maximum crop residue, with a minimum of soil disturbance while preparing the seedbeds for corn and soybeans, has the power to reduce water erosion up to 95 per cent, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Minimum tillage

There are different methods of minimum tillage.

One such system is the no-till, slot, or zero tillage system. Here the seedbed preparation and planting is done in one trip through the field. The only soil disturbance occurs at the immediate area of the planted row, and covers no more than 10 per cent of the total surface area of the field. Crop residue is left as a protective cover over the remaining surface area.

In a system such as this, if 1500 pounds of residue are left, the soil is protected 20 per cent better than by the methods used in a conventionally planted field. If there are up to 4200 pounds of crop residue left in that field, however, the system of no-till is utilized, the protection can be 80 per cent better than the traditional methods.

Chisel, disk, or a rotary tillage system is the most common type of minimum tillage seen in the Lancaster Farming area, according to Warren Archibald, Lancaster County District Conservationist. In this method, the seedbed is prepared by disturbing all the surface area of the field. Because of that fact, the farmer should make every effort to see that as much crop residue is left on the soil surface as possible.

Fall is a particularly critical time for the kind of tillage. The soil particles can be detached and loosened and they mellow rapidly, becoming easy prey to the winds of Winter and early Spring.

With 1500 pounds of residue left per acre, the field is protected an average of 18 per cent better than through the conventional Fall plowing. With 3600 pounds of residue, the rate rises to 60 per cent. And if a farmer leaves 5100 pounds of residue per acre on his fields in the Fall, his fields will be protected 75 per cent better.

It is important for the farmer to realize that with this system of working the field, the fewer number of Conservation tillage and terraces are used together to control erosion. There are an estimated 3,000 pounds of residue on this field per acre, after two discings and a planting.

(Turn to Page 32)

About 3600 pounds of residue per acre would be a good goal for every farmer. The residue could control erosion on slopes up to six per cent and 200 feet long, in a chisel-disk system, if tilled and planted on the contour.

EARL NEWCOMER SUPPORTS BOB BUTERA FOR GOVERNOR IN THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARY

For the past month I have spent time trying to learn as much as possible about our gubernatorial candidates and I am convinced that Bob is best suited for the job.

Butera's major concerns on Agriculture include the downward trend of farm income, extensive governmental interference and regulations, increased operating expenses, loss of prime farm land and resources, lack of adequate financing, and lack of uniform approach to solutions. Pennsylvania's agricultural prosperity is important to all Pennsylvanians, as well as to other residents of our nation.

EARL NEWCOMER

I URGE ALL PENNSYLVANIANS TO JOIN ME IN SUPPORTING BOB BUTERA FOR GOVERNOR IN THE REPUBLICAN PRIMARY ON MAY 16.

THIS AD HAS BEEN PAID FOR BY EARL NEWCOMER, LANCASTER CO., PA.

trips across that field, the better off he will be. Each trip through the field with equipment will cover up more of the residue he wants left covering his soil.

Spring chiseling has a higher percentage of soil-saving. A farmer with 1500 pounds of residue left on his fields after Spring tillage is protected 50 per cent better than by the conventional methods of preparing his fields. And 3600 pounds of crop residue will protect him 75 per cent better, while 5100 pounds raises the rate to 80 per cent.

One thing that Archibald pointed out for farmers to remember is that a chisel with straight shanks 12 inches apart will reduce crop residues 20 per cent for each tillage operation.

Farmers should also note that the tillage should be done on the contour on sloping ground. If he works his fields up and down, the water will follow the tillage lines down the hill, increasing the erosion. Even with the protective cover of residue between the crop rows, the area that is disturbed during the planting time can cause a serious erosion problem and stand loss if the water is allowed to follow the planted row down a slope.

The benefits of using conservation are many, according to Archibald. A farmer is able to plant earlier. He will save time, soil, energy, moisture, and money. The conservation tillage will provide a protective cover over his soil until his crop has grown tall enough to reach across the rows and provide its own cover.

A chisel plow with straight points covers about 20 per cent of the crop residue.

MAGNESIUM DEFICIENCY

IS IT A PROBLEM ON YOUR FARM?

IT HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED THAT THERE ARE PERIODS IN WHICH AN ANIMAL'S REQUIREMENTS FOR MAGNESIUM MAY BE INCREASED. BRIEFLY, THEY ARE:

1) ADVANCED PREGNANCY — The intake must supply Magnesium for two animals.
2) EARLY LACTATION — During this period a 2-day flow of milk will remove all of the Magnesium in the blood.
3) HIGH NITROGEN LEVELS IN FORAGES AND HAY — This is caused by heavy nitrogen fertilization and is believed to be more pronounced where there is an imbalance in the phosphorus and calcium content of the plant.

TO AID THE FEEDER IN COMBATTING THIS CONDITION OF MINERAL IMBALANCES, SEA BOARD OFFERS IT'S Mg14.

Mg14 is a supplemented mineral feed containing 14% MAGNESIUM and all other major and minor mineral elements, salt and vitamins to efficiently balance the nutrition cattle obtain from the pasture.

Dairy princess

lady is not busy with her work at home or away at a dairy function, she finds time for some of her many hobbies. Sandy enjoys macrame, art, photography, and various sports. While attending school, she participated in many athletic activities and continues to play tennis, softball and bowling. Sandy also enjoys plants and helps her mother with a large flower garden every Summer, and takes pride in working on her scrapbooks which she keeps on her roles as dairy princess.

Sandy has been actively involved in 4-H for many years and had the honor of going to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago in 1975 for her accomplishments in the dairy club. She was also selected as the outstanding 4-H girl that same year in Berks County. Sandy has participated in showing at fairs, "covering last place to first," she remarked, and is presenty a 4-H helper with dairy, swine and vegetables.

Other activities and organizations in which this dairy princess participates include the Virginville Grange, The Berks County Junior Holstein Club, where she is serving as vice-president, and her Sunday school where she is secretary. Other accomplishments include being selected as a semi-finalist in the Junior Holstein Distinguished Member Contest and being a resident assistant at college.

Looking towards the future, Sandy wants to continue to work with animals, hopefully as a veterinarian's assistant. But at present she is very dedicated to promoting dairy products. She has even painted a sign on a barn at home which reads: DRINK MILK. Sandy stated that she feels very lucky and honored to serve as dairy princess for the state and her county as well. "It is a great way of learning and traveling," she insisted. She also added that she thoroughly enjoys meeting new people because, "people are so different and are never the same in any area."

vocational agriculture education.

"There is a severe or critical shortage of qualified ag teachers in Pennsylvania and across the nation," reports Dr. James Mortensen, assistant professor of ag education at Penn State University.

A survey taken just prior to this school year (1977-1978) showed that of 12,536 teaching positions open around the country, 1794 became vacant during the Summer months last year with 302 positions remaining vacant at the opening of school in the Fall.

In the state of Pennsylvania, alone, nine positions could be filled at the present time with as many as 12 more expected by July 1.

"Of course, I'm only looking for the outstanding ones," qualifies James Fink, state vocational supervisor and senior program specialist. "I must have teachers who want to make the program succeed and who will graduate employable individuals."

Nevertheless, Fink says that although there are only nine positions open now, come graduation time (with more than 20 students graduating from Penn State in ag education), "I'll get as many as I can and still need some."

According to Mortensen, vocational agriculture education is growing in popularity across the state and nation (with Pennsylvania growing at a rate of 1000 students per year), and to keep up with the demand as well as the normal 10 per cent turnover rate of teachers, minimum of 37 instructors is needed to stay even in Pennsylvania.

"That figure doesn't even provide for the expansion of new programs," says Mortensen. "Normally, a total of 45 to 50 teachers are needed to take care of the average turnover rate plus program expansion." (In this case, the term "ag instructor" includes teachers of production agriculture as well as horticulture and floriculture.)

So, where does the problem lie in order that so many positions remain open in this field?

Mortensen explains that with an agriculture education background, the college graduate is in high demand with such organizations as the Federal Land Bank, the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service, and a multitude of agribusinesses as well as private businesses.

"A person born and reared on a farm can talk to farmers. They make better salesmen for these businesses," Mortensen says, adding that "anyone with a farm background has an advantage in the job market."

"Some also go to the Extension Service after receiving their degrees because they prefer a less formal educational setting," he continues.

Then, of course, there is always the ag education student who prefers to return to the home farm and to use his education background as a "spare tire in the truck."

"In other words, if he should have to leave the farm, his agriculture education background will give him an area to go into," explains the assistant professor.

James Fink adds, also, that the job is not for the undereducated.

"You either know your stuff or you don't make it," he says.

On the whole, it would appear as though ag education is a good field for an individual to enter.

The educational criteria are, for the most part, basic. An individual has to be a graduate of the department of agriculture education at Penn State University, the only department approved by the Pennsylvania Department of Education for preparing students for teaching certification.

Or, students with a baccalaureate degree in agricultural areas such as agronomy, forestry, or animal husbandry can obtain a teaching certificate by completing their 18 to 21 credits of education courses in two or three 10-week terms. In addition, special Summer sessions are scheduled primarily for these individuals.

Delaware Valley College, Doylestown, is also in a special cooperative arrangement with Penn State in order that their students are able to attend Summer sessions and receive Instructional I teaching certificates.

There is also an intern route for students with baccalaureate degrees and for persons with six years of experience as tradesmen in horticulture or agriculture mechanics.

According to Mortensen, 586 vocational agriculture instructors across the United States were hired to teach as interns or with temporary or emergency certificates. Out of the 285 teachers employed in the state, says Fink, 45 were hired in this manner.

"By now they are safely into their intern certification program," Fink points out.

According to both Fink and Mortensen, ag education is a good field for women, as well as men.

"We are getting increased enrollments of females," notes Mortensen. "We are graduating and certifying females for horticulture, floriculture, and ag production. There has been a dramatic change in this direction, and it will continue."

"There are a good number of girls," adds Fink, "and they're not having real problems." Many are in the floriculture field, but Pennsylvania does have two female production agriculture teachers.

(Personal interviews with agriculture instructors will be incorporated into the second part of this story.)

Carriage sale offers variety

BLUE BALL – The seventh annual May auction of carriages, sleighs, and antiques will be held at Martin's, Blue Ball, on May 18, 19, and 20.

Included in the sale will be lots of furniture, household goods, tinware, and numerous lots of horse related items. Over 200 carriages, carts, and sleighs will be sold. Many of these vehicles are restored and unusual vehicles, ready to use for showing events or be added to a museum.

In 1977, a record was set at the November sale with An Abbot and Downing Concord Stage Coach bringing $25,000. The coach was to be put on display in a private museum.

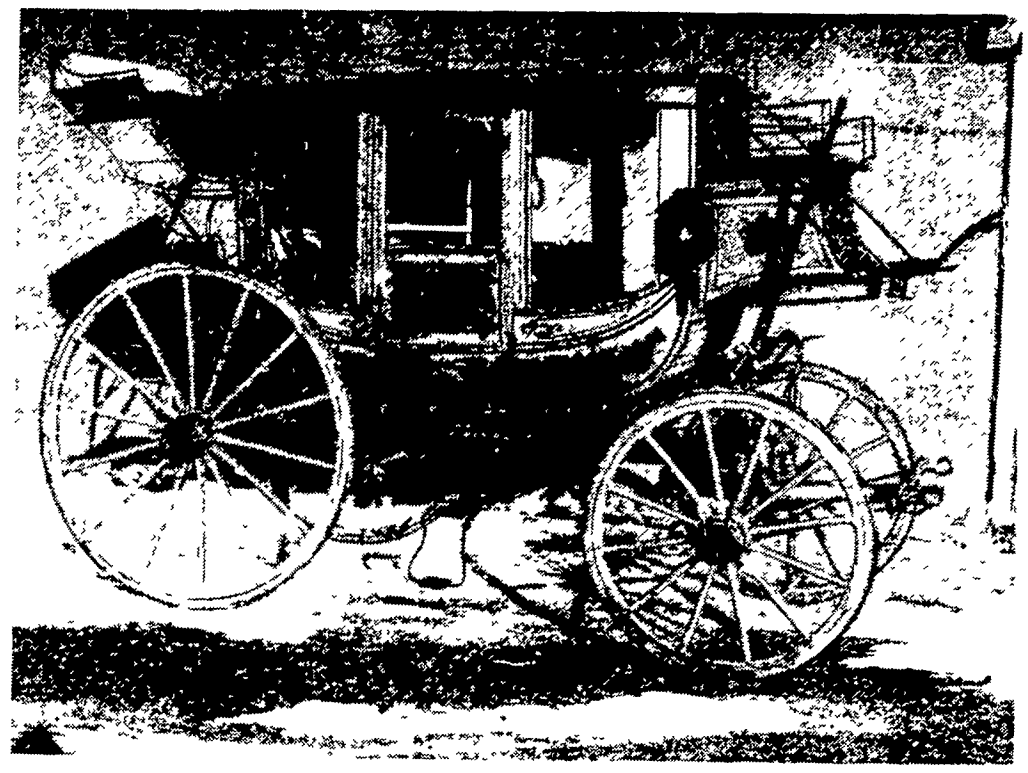
A similar stagecoach will be sold at this sale, to be auctioned off on May 20. Already people from England, California, Texas, Washington, and Ohio have shown interest in the vehicle.

Another item to be sold is an English Road Coach by Peter & Son, England, with all its appointments. It had been restored and was then imported for a Texan carriage enthusiast. The owner, who is condensing his collection, has decided to sell it.

Other vehicles which can be seen include a three-seated mountain wagon used in the Mohawk Mountains resort area for many years; a miniature circus wagon believed to be used by Barnum and Bailey Brothers Circus; a very early American railroad express wagon made by Studebaker and Co.; an ornate horse drawn hearse, a commercial medicine wagon used in New York;, and unusual hose fire engine made in Philadelphia around 1850 that has been restored and is believed to have been used in Lancaster for many years

Idaho

Idaho comes from an Indian word meaning "gem of the mountains '



This Abbot and Downing stagecoach will be offered to the highest bidder at the Martin's auction on May 18, 19, and 20.

Senate committee studying possibility of 2nd vet school

HARRISBURG – A group of five Pennsylvania senators has been chosen to study the plausibility of converting the Norristown State Hospital into a new or branch medical or veterinary school. On that Senate committee, aided by a special advisory committee, is Sen. Clarence F. Manbeck, R-48, Lebanon; Sen. Michael A. O'Pake, D-11, Reading; Sen. H. Craig Lewis, D-6, Feasterville; Sen. John James Sweeney, D-26, Upper Darby; and Sen. Edwin G. Holl, R-24, Lansdale.

According to Senator Manbeck, Pennsylvania is suffering a critical shortage of general physicians and veterinarians.

"The shortage is particularly noticeable in rural and inner-city areas," he states.

The GOP lawmaker also noted that there is only one veterinary school in the state. For this reason, possibilities of a veterinary school, as well as a general medical school, are being looked into.

At this point, not much action has been taken on the project. The five-member special senate committee has toured the facilities and chosen 16 individuals to serve as their advisory committee. On May 25, the two groups will meet at the state hospital at which time the advisory committee will tour the facilities.

"Right now, we don't know the expense involved or the practicability," stated Denise Sanders, communications officer with the Republican Caucus. "That's the purpose of the study – to see how feasible it would be."

Ms. Sanders projects that the report will probably be completed in September or October with June and July scheduled as research month.

Approximately five per cent of school aged children in the U.S. suffer hearing loss problems, and it is estimated one of every 2,000 infants is deaf or is the victim of a severe hearing problem, according to officials of the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation.

Hearing problems have become so widespread today, more people suffer from impaired hearing than from heart disease, cancer, blindness, tuberculosis and multiple sclerosis combined, according to the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation.

The Decker herd was founded 44 years ago. At its peak the herd included more than 400 head supplying milk for a thriving retail business.

Following the sale of the milk business, the milking herd was gradually reduced. Some cows were in other herds, not on test. Hence DHIA samples are limited. However, Carroll has continued to raise heifers. This accounts for the large number of young cows and a larger than usual proportion of bred and younger heifers. Conditions have been extremely practical. The herd includes a lot of good cattle that will make their purchasers real glad they didn't miss the sale.

THE HERD INCLUDES:

MEDICINE AND MANAGEMENT

By CARL TROOP, VMD

Brucellosis is a potential time bomb

There is a dangerous situation existing in the dairy industry today; a virtual time bomb just waiting for the right conditions to explode. And the reasons for this dangerous situation are the same as for most calamities which have befallen the human race. They fail to learn from history; from the experiences of those who have suffered before us and whose lessons we would do well to heed today.

That time bomb is "brucellosis" ("Bangs disease", "infectious abortion", or "contagious bovine abortion"). Those who were in the dairy business in the twenties, thirties and forties remember only too well the "abortion storms" and ravages of a herd infested with the bacteria "Brucella Abortus", the causative organism of Brucellosis.

In 1935 over 11 per cent of the cattle tested showed positive to brucellosis. With the advent of market cattle testing, the United States Department of Agriculture's cooperative program for control and eradication of bovine brucellosis in 1934, development of a vaccine for brucellosis in 1942, and the institution of the milk ring test as part of the official program in 1952, incidence of brucellosis has been reduced to the point that it no longer affects the lives of most of today's dairy farmers except through the testing procedures required to keep it under control.

Today, in most areas of the country incidence of brucellosis is less than one half of one per cent, some areas even much less. Farmers are no longer concerned about a disease they have only heard stories about, a disease they have never encountered.

In the late '60's and early '70's many officials in Pennsylvania were recommending the discontinuation of vaccination for brucellosis in an attempt to finally eliminate the disease through vigorous surveillance, testing, and slaughter of the few remaining reactors. The problem with the continuation of vaccination, many vaccinates would show up positive on tests just from the vaccination and as long as vaccination continued, elimination of the animal actually infected would be difficult.

Many farmers topped calfhood vaccination for brucellosis. The incidence of the disease continued to decline and many farmers became overconfident to the point of being sloppy in their acquisition of new cattle. There were still a few hotbeds of brucellosis around, and many farmers now had herds of highly susceptible cattle, ones which had no longer been vaccinated as calves. Infected animals were brought into the herd and the disease started to spread again.

Right now we have a very explosive situation. There are areas of increasing incidence of brucellosis in a very susceptible population. Less than 25 per cent of the calves are being vaccinated today as compared to over 50 per cent just ten years ago. Each and every dairy farmer should become acutely aware of the implications to his own herd and learn from what has happened in the past and take steps necessary to prevent it from happening again. The proven formula is there, it has worked before. We had better apply it soon again before we find ourselves starting over from scratch.

Vaccination alone is not the answer, but it is certainly worthy of consideration. Vaccination for brucellosis, as for all other vaccinations, is not 100 per cent effective. It will drastically lower infection rate (about 90 per cent in an outbreak in an invaccinated population to 25-30 per cent in a vaccinated population) and abortion rate (from 10 to 15 per cent). Calves vaccinated in Pennsylvania now must be done between the ages of two to six months. Calves vaccinated at less than six months have very little probability of showing positive on later tests for brucellosis. Herds which buy many replacements are the herds most in need of calfhood vaccination. In closed herds which are free of Brucellosis, vaccination may not be necessary.

The most important phase of brucellosis control is "BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU BUY". This cannot be stressed too much. A health chart is not enough. Outbreaks in local herds have been traced to animals that entered herds with good health charts. As one official succinctly put it "you got a good chart but a bad animal." Back when the ravages of brucellosis were still fresh on farmers minds, they would go to great pains to determine where a purchased replacement was coming from. They would want to know the history of the cow, the reproductive history of the herd she was coming from, and would

4 HIGH REVERSE CAGE IS THE MOST ADVANCED, COMPACT AND EFFICIENT SYSTEM FOR NEW AND CONVERTED HOUSES.

EGG MAKER SERIES — 4-HIGH LAYER REVERSE CAGE

For producers who prefer higher bird density with the reverse cage concept, Diamond Automation has developed this new 4 tier modified stair step system. It features a big reverse cage with Contour front. Any of the four Diamond feeding systems can be used. No chute scrapers are used on the manure drying boards.

NO OTHER COMPANY OFFERS YOU SO MUCH

Producers can now choose from four feeding systems

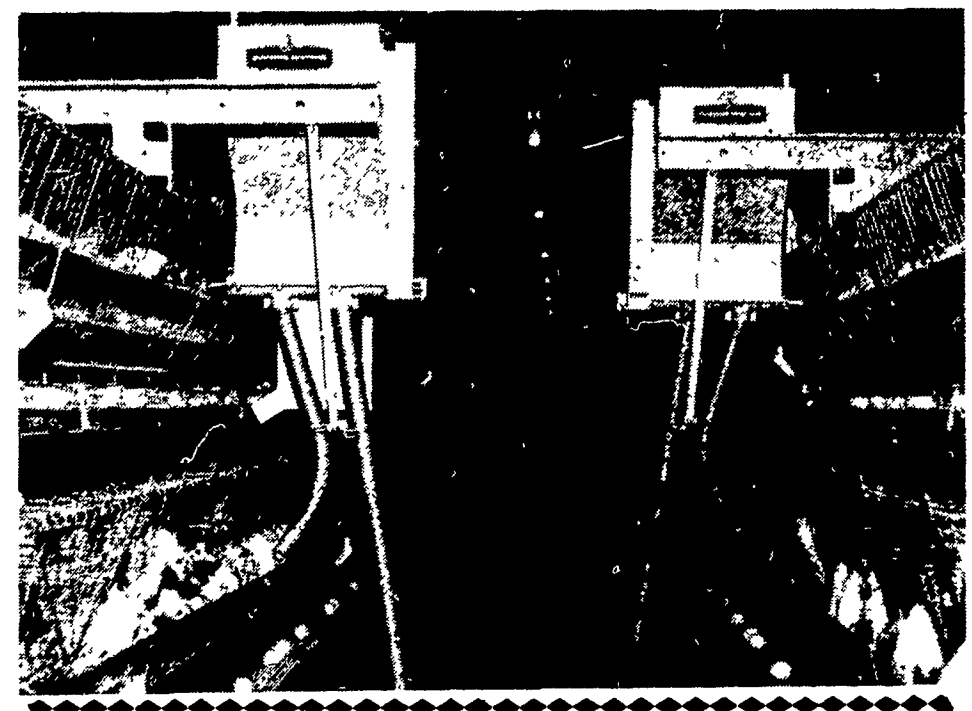
The Feedsaver® System is the first truly controlled feeding system. Battery powered hoppers travel down the cage row at timed intervals and deposit a predetermined amount of feed in the deep "V" troughs All birds get the same fresh feed There's no high-grading. A feed sensor automatically compensates for differences in bird's feeding habits The Feedsaver® System cuts feed and electric energy costs. For some, the feed savings are substantial.

Two new types of Diamond chain feeders are also available . . . the flat chain and the link chain . . . in addition to the Keenco F-80 chain feeder. All are compatible with the new cage systems and deliver a balanced ration to the birds. Trough design reduces feed waste from billing-out.



Let the Diamond Feedsaver Cage System Work for you.

TO RECOGNIZE STAGE OF MATURITY

Many forage crops will be cut for silage and for hay in the coming month. One of the key items in top quality forage is to harvest at the proper stage of maturity. Winter rye is top feed value at heading time; other winter grains are best after heading and into the blossom stage. Grasses give the most feed nutrients when cut at heading time. Legumes such as red clover and alfalfa are top nutritional value when cut in the bud to early blossom stage. Crops that are allowed to get more mature will drop in feed value and increase in fiber content. Cutting at the proper stage of maturity is very important in getting top quality hay or silage.

Germans

Service), and the remainder of the men were in related agribusinesses, including banking.

Although their tour through Lancaster County was marred by steady rain and poor visibility, the West Germans liked what they saw. Despite the bad weather,, they could tell the region was beautiful, the farms were neat, and the people were friendly and hard working. Aside from the four farms, the group also saw Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, Lancaster, the home of many bulls whose semen is available in Germany as well as other European countries. The tourists were welcomed by general manager David Yoder and production director Floyd Weidler. Taking the cutomary tour through ABC's barns, the visitors were awed by the size and condition of the sires. Although only a few in the group were still active in dairy farming, many of them had formerly been in the dairy business.

The bulls at Atlantic, as well as the cows at visited dairy farms were thought to be "skinny" by European standards. Europeans have traditionally bred cattle to produce both meat and milk, hence their animals are noticeably fleshier. But that's changing slowly with increased introduction of American cattle and semen. Nevertheless, it needed to be explained more than once that the "skinny" cattle they were looking at is what it takes to have superior milk production.

If the hard work, persistence, and productivity of Pennsylvania's farmers is what impressed the Europeans most of all, milk production averages ran a close second. Although only one of the visited herds could boast a butterfat average of more than 700 pounds, the Germans were inspired by all herds. Cows which produced 100 or more pounds of milk per day or had lactations of more than 20,000 pounds of milk, were studied closely and talked about later.

While visiting a Nebraska Unit on a hog farm between Mount Joy and Manheim, the Germans were obviously pleased with what they saw but not convinced that such a housing unit would work in their cooler climate in northern Germany. Although the Nebraska housing concept is still very new in Lancaster County, similar units have been tried in Germany, Lancaster Farming was told. One farmer said he saw his first German version of a Nebraska unit eight years ago.

More than a few Germans pointed excitedly at a bucketful antibiotics that they found in the swine producer's service room. "That's forbidden in Germany," they announced emphatically. German hog producers are required by law to produce pork without the aid of drugs. Similar movements are underway in this country.

During the course of discussions, it was learned that German swine producers are capable of the same efficiencies that American farmers are encountering. While a "no antibiotics" policy might be considered as a hindrance to achieving production efficiency, another is the fact that Germany's livestock industry depends heavily on feed grains from the United States. Feed costs there are sometimes double what they are here.

Interested very much in the kinds of crops grown in this area, the tourists from Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, observed that Lancaster Countians can grow a variety of crops which their homeland isn't suited for. Corn, for example, can only be grown for silage, and alfalfa won't grow at all.

The lifestyles and management practices of the Amish were of particular interest to the visitors from Germany. While the Amish originated in southern portions of Germany, they are unknown in their homeland as well as other parts of Europe.

The Amish farmer, his family, and two representatives from Inter-State Milk Producers were on hand to offer the visitors an unusual look into Amish life and work.

"When you talk about advertising and public relations, there's no better place to start than right here," the Amishman said while jabbing his finger at the macadam beneath his feet.

Boyd Gartley, director for member and public relations for Inter-State Milk Producers did his own bit of promoting while visiting with the Europeans. Dressed in the garb of a colonial trapper, complete with Pennsylvania Long Rifle and powder horn, Gartley greeted the group at the Harvest Drive Restaurant and later entertained them with some strumming on his guitar.

"Come on over to Germany and help promote milk over there," the visibly delighted Germans told him.

Other aspects of Pennsylvania agriculture which impressed the group were calf hutches, contoured strip farming, sweep-in feed areas, Amish buggies, and most of all - the family farming concept where everybody pitches in and works hard.

even go as far as to want to know about any herds from which cows had been purchased by the farmer they were buying from.

Nowadays cows are doing so much traveling there is often no sure way to insure that you are getting a brucellosis free cow. In her travels on trucks or through livestock yards she may have had only slight contact with an infected cow. But that would be enough.

The recommendation of many officials is to isolate every purchased animal and retest after 30 days. Now we all know that officials don't realize how impractical this would be on most of today's farms where a farmer has to utilize his utmost efficiency to even have a chance at a profit. He can't be spending an extra half hour a day caring for two or three extra animals separate from the rest of the herd. However unless you have taken the time to obtain a history on the animal and know how she has traveled, there is no other way to be sure she will not bring in an infection and spread it through the rest of the herd. It all boils down to how much one cares to gamble.

That health chart may not be worth the paper it is written on. Assuming it was legitimately obtained in the first place (assuming, I said), since she was tested

Walker calls for registration of foreigners who buy U.S. farmland

WASHINGTON, D.C. May 10 – Congressman Bob Walker of Lancaster on Wednesday introduced legislation requiring foreigners or their agents to record with the Secretary of Agriculture any substantial investment in farmland within the United States.

"Farmland constitues what I believe is America's most precious resource and it must be adequately preserved and protected," Walker said.

"With the slumping dollar and sagging world economy, many foreign investors have begun purchasing disturbingly large amounts of prime American farmland.

The time to begin monitoring this situation is now before our nation is faced with a full scale crisis," Walker continued.

Under the provisions of Walker's bill, which is the most comprehensive of its type to be introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives, any foreigner or his agent would be required to report specificed information by January 31 of each calendar year to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Robert Walker

The information to be reported would include any transaction involving 25 or more acres or involving more than $25,000. In addition, the location and the intended use of such land would be revealed.

"Seven states have already enacted legislation similar to the bill I am now introducing at the federal level.

"To assess the overall impact and consequences of such foreign activity within our borders, I believe federal action is warranted to require this kind of information to be reported," Walker continued.

Failure to comply with the provisions of Walker's bill would carry a penalty requiring the payment of a maximum fine of $10,000. If Walker's bill is enacted into law it would become effective retroactive to January 1, 1978.

"American farmland is and has been a mainstay of our strength and world prominence. My proposal is a step toward the goal of preserving that mainstay. Our future is dependent upon our commitment to assuring that no outside influences will be able to control our food growing capacity," Walker concluded.

Dutch Country Council meets

LEESPORT – The Dutch Country Council of Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives held a one day institute on May 4 in which 37 FFA and 4-H members participated. The institute, held at the Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport, was designed to provide an educational program with recreational and social activities concerning the cooperative way of doing business in the American enterprise system.

Represented in the Council were participants from Dauphin, Lebanon, Schuylkill, and Berks counties. During the day long event they heard eyewitness reports from Ann Holcombe, a Berks County 4-H'er who attended the P.A.F.C. Summer Institute at Shippensburg State College last Summer and James Shrawder, member of the Kutztown FFA who attended the American Institute of Cooperation youth conference which was held in Texas. Other activities included slides and film strips about cooperatives and group games also designed to educate the participants about other aspects of cooperatives.

Approximately 12 to 14 youths from the Dutch Country Council will be selected to attend the P.A.F.C. Summer Institute which will be held July 9-12, at Shippensburg State College, Shippensburg. They will be selected based on their quiz scores, which were given at the end of the day, the information in their activities report, and recommendations from their advisors or leaders.

Youth program gets $17 million for Summer conservation work

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus and Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland announced last week that more than $17.7 million for Youth Conservation Corps (YCC) employment programs this Summer is being allocated to 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and the Northern Marianas Islands by the two federal departments. Pennsylvania will receive $1,141,000 through the program.

The grants are part of the $60 million appropriated for operation of federal and state YCC camps this summer. About 47,800 youths will be employed for eight-week periods in 1,500 YCC camps nationwide. Of these, approximately 14,900 youths will be employed in 789 state YCC camps, using the funds granted to the states.

The YCC program is designed to accomplish needed conservation work on public lands, while providing gainful employment for 15 to 18-year-old youths and giving them an understanding and appreciation of the Nation's natural environment and heritage.

Beef cook-off set

UNIVERSITY PARK – The third annual Pennsylvania Beef Cook-Off, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Beef Council and Cattlemen's Association, will be held June 19 on Penn State's main campus.

According to Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, Penn State professor of animal science, the cook-off will be held at the Human Development Building starting at 1 p.m. Prizes will be awarded to the top five contestants.

"Any beef dish, using chucks, round, rump or fresh brisket cut of beef in any form may be entered," Dr. Wilson explains. "The dish must contain a minimum of two pounds and not more than five pounds of beef."

The event features beef recipes and helps in understanding the cuts of beef and their proper preparation. Any person, 18 years or older, without professional food status is invited to enter.

Entry blanks may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Mary Wilson, 862 Webster Drive, State College, Pa. 16801.

The 1976 winner, Mrs. Shirley De Santis, of Easton, won the Pennsylvania Cook-Off and later was the national winner.

One of the fastest animals in the world is the spine-tailed swift, reports Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine for children. True to their name, swifts have been known to reach speeds of more than 100 miles per hour in level flight.

xxx

The collared lizard, which normally crawls on four legs, often escapes from its worst enemy, the roadrunner, by rising up and running on its hind legs only, according to Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine for children. If the roadrunner bites off its tail, the lizard grows another in a few months.

Booklet available

LANCASTER – Many plants valuable for environmental improvement in Northeastern United States are described in a new publication by the Soil Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, reports Warren Archibald, District Conservationist, Lancaster.

"Conservation Plants for the Northeast" features full color photographs of 60 plants and provides information about their conservation uses and growth rates as well as the site, conditions, and climatic zones in which they can grow. The 40-page booklet also has a section on how to establish the plants.

Some of the plants described are useful for conservation purposes on disturbed areas, coastal dunes, and sandy and lak areas, noted Archibald. Others make good wildlife food and clover or serve effectively as windbreaks, screens, hedges, or ornamental ground covers.

Copies of "Conservation Plants for the Northeast" are available for $1.75 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Plant lovers' corner

Cabbage maggots will soon attack cabbage plants and other cole crops and cause them to appear sickly and wilted, says experts. Adult maggots (flies) lay eggs at the same time sour cherry trees are in full bloom. The flies lay eggs on the stems of cabbage transplants and the tiny maggots cause the roots to become brownish and slimy by their feeding activity. Many times the legless, white maggots can be found feeding in the stems and larger roots of plants.

Cabbage plants can be protected from maggot attack by applying a spray of 20 per cent diazinon (4 fluid ounces per 1,000 square feet) to the developing plants. The mixture can be applied with a small sprayer or a sprinkler can. One should be sure to soak the stems and soil around the stems thoroughly.

Flower seeds need to be removed

MEDIA – If one allows plants to go to seed, they may not keep blooming, points out experts. Plants use up lots of nutrients forming seeds and they just don't have the ability to produce both flowers and a heavy crop of seeds. So one should remember to snip off the old flowers and seed structures so no seeds will form.

Annuals such as petunias, marigolds, zinnias, and verbenas will be producing flowers and seed most of the summer. A person should comb through them about once a week to remove dead flowers before seeds start to develop. Flowers should be pinched off with one's fingernails and annuals will continue blossoming profusely until Fall. Some perennials, such as garden lilies, iris, sweet peas, and spring bulbs bloom only once a season. After the flowers have faded and died, one can snip them off with scissors or pruning shears so the plants can build up food reserves for quality flowers next season.

If a person thinks that letting his plants go to seed will save buying seeds next Spring, he may be mistaken – especially with annual hybrids such as petunias. With these he'll see volunteer petunia plants next year. But the second generation won't look like the first – off-colors will predominate. That's why it is best for a person to start with new seeds every season.

Man figures high in dairy reproductive problems

By SALLY BAIR
Staff writer

UNIVERSITY PARK – Man is a very important part of the picture in effective reproductive management, especially in artificial insemination, according to Dr. Richard Saacke, professor of dairy physiology at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Va. Saacke was speaking at the dairy herd management conference held at the Pennsylvania State University. Problems which arise from artificial breeding, he said, are mostly "our problems."

Technician variance is responsible for part of the problem in conception. "This does not just mean the way he puts the semen in the cow, but how he thaws the semen," he says. There is 100 per cent live sperm in the straw, but a man must know how the semen is produced to know how to thaw it properly.

How the technician raises the semen from the neck of the tank can be important to the final results, Saacke said. "Straws are very vulnerable to temperature change, and if the temperature is not safe, it will lower the viability of the semen in that straw."

In handling your own semen, it is important to remember that straws are very vulnerable to error because of the high surface to volume ratio. "Straws respond much quicker to human error (than ampules)," Saacke declared.

"Competence in depositing it in the body of the uterus is very critical to overall success," Saacke told the dairymen.

He explained that there is more in the semen straw than genetics, saying there is fertility rate, pounds of predicted difference, bulls which have been screened for repeatability, and rigid health tests.

A cycling cow is important to overall reproductive management, and the best way to get a cycling cow is through good heat detection.

"You should learn how to shorten the number of days open in your herd. Heat detection rate is more important than conceptions in overall reproductive management," he told the group.

He said, "In Virginia we are missing 50 per cent of the heats on the average, and you probably are in Pennsylvania, too."

Saacke said, "While I am a proponent of heat detection aids, they will not displace observation." He added that a combination of the rump device and chalk can be effective in detecting heat. "If you get the cow in a standing heat after calving and record that heat, then get another heat on the cow, you can have confidence that the heat is real."

"A standing response is important to conception. To be certain of the heat, be sure the cow is standing, and make sure there was a heat interval earlier of 20-21 days." Heats must be checked twice daily.

In loose housing, studies show that highest mounting frequency is between 10 p.m. and 12 midnight, with the highest being at midnight. Mounting frequency drops during the day, although many cows had heats of seven to eight hours in duration.

Saacke noted that cows with longer heats are sometimes more fertile, and there is some value in breeding later in the heat.

According to Saacke, "Reproduction is most efficient in high producing herds. Within herds however, a high producing cow is sometimes harder to settle back."

Saacke stressed the importance of records in efficient reproduction. He said "least-cost reproduction" is important, and this means keeping good records, having efficient heat detection, and a good herd health program."

Bob Butera is the only Republican for Governor with a plan for rural Pennsylvania.

From agricultural research to the development of a new agricultural financing program, Bob Butera has a 15-point program for progress in rural affairs in Pennsylvania. He is the only Republican candidate for Governor who thinks enough about rural Pennsylvania to propose a complete rural affairs program for his Administration as Governor.

Bob has a program which calls for better maintenance of secondary roads, review of the effectiveness of the Clean and Green law, land use planning, support for the Milk Marketing Board . . . but, most importantly, Bob's entire concept of state government is to "get government off our backs and out of our lives."

Bob is counting on rural Pennsylvania to help win the election and then counting on us to help him return pride and common sense to Pennsylvania government.

Save Energy and get FREE HOT WATER...

with the revolutionary...

MUELLER FRE-HEATER

The Mueller Fre-Heater conserves energy and provides "free" hot water by capturing the heat now wasted!

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS.

Rather than using noisy, dust creating fans with fragile, dirt collecting air-cooled condensers, the refrigerant is routed to a specially designed condenser/heat exchanger and its heat is transferred to the water

A thermostatically controlled valve delivers 145° F water to a storage tank

In addition to the thermostatic valve, a mixing valve is provided to permit "prepping" temperature water

Thus, the Fre-Heater delivers two temperatures of water - prepping and washing

Tests indicate the Fre-Heater consumes 10% less power than an air-cooled system . . and you get Free Hot Water!

ELIMINATES REFRIGERATION SERVICE PROBLEMS!

The most common causes of slow cooling in bulk milk cooling systems are related to the air-cooled condenser

The Fre-Heater eliminates these problems because.

- There is no air-cooled condenser
- The Fre-Heater is installed indoors
- There are no noisy fans to fail
- The head pressure is very stable — assuring longer compressor life
- There are no cold weather starting problems, plus . . . the Fre-Heater conserves energy and produces Free Hot Water!

HOW MUCH WATER CAN BE GENERATED?

There are many variables, so this question cannot be answered directly, however, a rule of thumb is that a Fre Heater operating on 60° F well water will produce a volume of 145° F water similar to the amount of milk produced during a milking

Small game farm offers haven to retired farmer

By SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Writer

QUARRYVILLE – In a day of mechanized and computerized farming, it is refreshing to get off the technological whirlwind and take a step in nature's direction. Now that Elra Manning is retired, he has the time, the patience, and the know-how to raise a wide variety of game fowl with a really personal touch.

For nine years Elra has been caring for and hatching many game birds such as the quail in Providence Township, Lancaster County. Tucked away in the woods surrounding the old iron ore mines just north of Quarryville along Route 222 are the cages and small buildings which house Elra Manning's birds. Although Manning now lives alone, he is surrounded by a variety of creatures which seem to be more like pets than merchandise to him.

Elra traced his present interest in raising quail and exotic birds to his father's similar interest when Elra was a boy. Manning also explained that he had worked for the Hershey Game Farm. He credits his knowledge of the care in handling many varieties of fowl to a lot of experience, and added to this experience is evidently a genuine interest and appreciation for nature's creatures. This enthusiasm for living things, birds and animals as well, is readily evident in Elra. Manning says he enjoys visitors and advises them to call ahead to make sure he will be there to give them a tour.

The primary inventory at the Quail Farm is the quail or bob-white. Manning has two large pens of breeders. One pen contains 100 1-year old birds. The second pen holds 200 2-year olds. The quails are housed in small wooden structures for feeding and laying facilities. Attached to the shelters are wire mesh cages placed several feet off the ground. The cages are elevated from the ground to protect the birds from their natural prediators such as raccoons, skunks, hawks and opossums.

Manning related how man can be more of a threat to the fowl he raises than fauna and fowl of the forest.

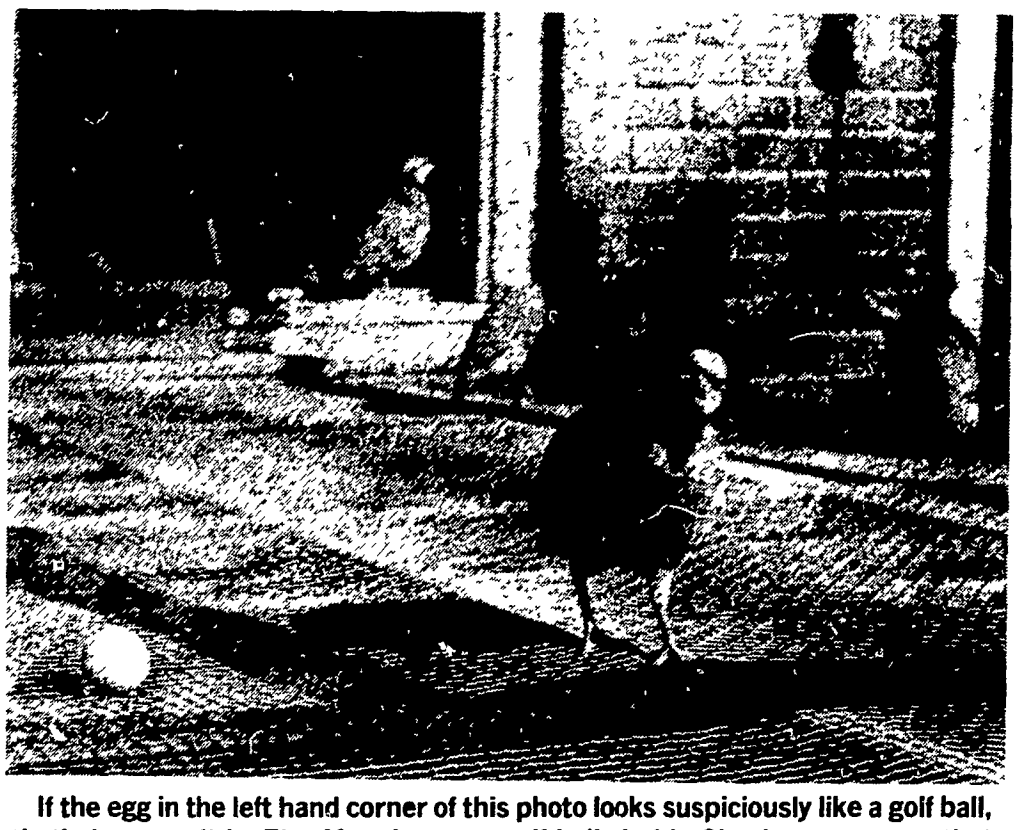
"Each Winter I let some of the quails free to choose their mates and to select their territory in the surrounding woods here," he says. "When hunting season comes in, hunters will find a covey of these quail and hunt it until they kill every last one of them."

Manning also told of youngsters who came and shot his peacocks with bows and arrows which had strings attached in order to allow them to retrieve the beautiful birds once they were hit. Manning says he no longer keeps the pea fowl because of the human predatory element.

Manning related that the ratio of male to female in the quail pens is two females to each male. In a good hatching season, a quail farmer hopes for 65 per cent live hatches. As has been the case with many farming enterprises, this Spring has brought less than expected returns. Manning finds his production reduced to somewhere near 40 per cent hatching.

Elra Manning prepares to feed his bob whites.

The above bird is a Golden Pheasant which as a beautiful orange and black cape and a brilliant red breast.



If the egg in the left hand corner of this photo looks suspiciously like a golf ball, that's because it is. Elra Manning puts golf balls in his Chuckers cages so that the birds peck at them, find them unrewarding, and thus do not peck real eggs.

"The nights have been too cold and the eggs chill too quickly," Manning explained. The eggs are gathered and placed in incubators. The incubators Manning uses are old ones which look like antique ice boxes with glass doors on the front and wooden trays inside. Manning controls the temperature and humidity inside the incubators to provide the proper conditions for hatching.

Manning has to turn the eggs everday for as long as they remain in the incubator. "Those self turning incubators are very expensive," he said. "I have plenty of time to turn them anyway!" he quipped.

The humidity level is very important in the hatching process, he says. The eggs must not dry out nor should they be kept in too wet an environment.

When the chicks hatch, Manning moves them to glass-enclosed brooder boxes where they stay warm and dry with the aid of electric light and heat. When the chicks are still in the brooder environment, they sometimes develop cannibalistic tendencies. To stop the pecking of other birds, Manning de-beaks them and also administers a chemical to the pecked bird.

"If the cannibalistic chick pecks and gets a snoutful of that stuff, he shakes his head all over. It must be awful tasting stuff!" Manning explained.

Manning markets his chicks at a set rate for day-old chicks. Each week after a day old there is a five cent a piece increase in cost. He is presently in the process of filling an order for 1000 day-old quail chicks.

In addition to the several hundred bob-whites residing at Manning's game farm are a variety of other unusual birds. One type of fowl not at all related to the quail are the Aracona chickens. Twenty hens and one rooster, not to be trusted too faithfully when it comes to flogging an intruder, live in one building on the farm. The hens lay naturally colored eggs. A box of eggs collected on the day of the interview showed pastel pinks, greens, and blues.

According to Manning, the eggs are very brightly colored when freshly laid but when the air gets to them they lighten considerably. The Aracona eggs are the same size as the large eggs from the usual laying hens. The Aracona hens also look similar in size and color to the familiar red laying chickens.

In addition to the regular bob-whites which are brown and black in color, Manning also raises a number of related bird types. One variety is the Texas Blondes which are characterized by their soft, honey-buff colored feathers.

A third variety of quail at the farm is the silver bob-white. Manning has one pair of these gray and black beauties which cost him $35 a pair. Most of these unusual birds he purchases from an importer.

The Bayberry, a partridge family fowl from India, is larger than the bob-white. The bob-white may weigh one-half a pound according to Manning while the Bayberry weighs one to one- and one-half pounds when fully grown. The Bayberry is covered with brown feathers over his body and wing feathers create a striped effect of brown and black. The cocks have spurs on their legs and the females are as pretty as the males minus the spurs.

Homestead Notes

To sell the quails or any other game fowl such as pheasant or partride, one must have a license issued by a game warden. Neither Manning nor any other game raiser nor anyone else for that matter – may capture wild birds since this is against the law. Manning purchased his beginning birds from a licensed retailer and then got his own license to sell his chicks.

Manning explained further that each fidavit signed by him saying that the quail in their possession were raised and sold by a licensed farmer, thus preventing prosecution for illegal possession or capture of these protected game fowl.

The most strikingly feathered bird on the quail farm is the Chinese Golden Pheasant. Similar in size to the pheasant seen in the woods in this region, the Chinese Golden Pheasant is brilliantly colored. He has a shiney red breast, bright blues and greens on the rest of his body, a two-foot long brown and orange spotted

SPRING LAMB

4½ to 5 pounds lean shoulder or breast of lamb
Flour
6 to 8 tablespoons of beef fat or butter
Salt and pepper
Broth or water
12 turnips, peeled and halved
12 small white onions, peeled
Butter
2 teaspoons sugar
2 garlic cloves
4 carrots, peeled and cut in strips
1 or 2 leeks
12 small new potatoes
1 package frozen peas

Cut meat into serving-size pieces. Flour lightly and brown thoroughly on all sides in six to eight, or more tablespoons of fat. When meat is browned, add salt, and pepper to taste and enough broth or water to cover half the meat. Cover pan and simmer gently for 45 minutes. While meat is simmering, sear the turnips and onions in butter, then turn heat down and let them saute gently, shaking the pan from time to time to cook evenly. Sprinkle with sugar to glaze slightly.

Remove meat to casserole, add turnips, onions, garlic, carrots, leeks, and new potatoes (with skins on.) Skim fat from liquid in which meat was cooked and strain sauce through a fine sieve. Pour strained sauce over meat and vegetables and add broth, if necessary. Place lid on casserole and bake in 350 degree F. oven for one hour. Add frozen peas 15 minutes before meat and vegetables are thoroughly cooked. This can be thickened with Beurre Manie if desired. Serves six.

Rub a little soft butter and flour together with your fingers. Keep adding flour until mixture can be rolled into balls the size of green peas. Above recipe serves six.

1 pound ground beef, lightly par-boiled
4 cups tomato sauce
½ pound sliced, mild cheese
1 cup grated sharp cheese
1 teaspoon thyme or oregano
⅓ cup Parmesan cheese

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. In a greased baking dish (13 by 8 inches), layer lasagna strips alternately with ground beef, tomato sauce, mild cheese, and sharp cheese. Sprinkle on parmesan cheese. Bake 40 minutes.

STUFFED PORK CHOPS

1 clove garlic
½ teaspoon salt
4 thin slices Gruyere or Cheddar cheese
1½ tablespoons all-purpose flour
¼ cup butter
4 thick boneless pork chops
4 small slices cooked ham
1 teaspoon dried rosemary
2 eggs
1 teaspoon paprika pepper
5 tablespoons grated cheese

Finely chop the garlic. Cut a deep pocket in each chop and rub with salt and garlic. Fill each pocket with a slice of ham and cheese and a little rosemary. Mix together the flour, eggs, grated cheese and paprika to form a paste. Coat the chops in this paste. Melt the butter in a frying pan. Add the chops and fry gently for about six minutes on each side, until crisp and golden brown. Do not cook too quickly or the outside will be brown before the meat is cooked through. Serve hot, with boiled potatoes and asparagus. Serves four.

Variation: For a change, try filling the pork chops with any of your favorite stuffing mixes: sage and onion, rice and mushroom or apple and raisin. Then coat in the paste and proceed as above.

It's time to think about dairy recipes

It's that time of the year, again. What time of the year, you say? Time to send in recipes for Lancaster Farming's annual Dairy Issue, June 3.

Dairy issue is the edition in which all farm wives, whether or not they are involved in dairying, have the chance to send in their favorite recipes using milk, cheese, or any other dairy products.

A multitude of recipes poured into our office last year making it one of the most successful issues for dairy recipes. This June 3, however, we want to top last year's record and publish several pages of recipes for all homemakers to enjoy. But, we can only do this with your help.

If you have one, or several, favorite dairy recipes, send them to "June Dairy Recipes," Lancaster Farming Newspaper, Box 366, Lititz, Pa , by May 27. That only gives you two weeks, including mailing time, to get those to us. Therefore, if you want to take part in this year's multi-paged dairy issue recipe section, don't put off writing.

As a special thank-you, we are again offering a specially created gift for every individual who helps us with this project.

We're looking forward to hearing from our readers. Don't forget to include your name, address, and phone number with each recipe or pages of recipes sent in.

Noodle casserole (left) and Cherry Torte, two selections from this week's "Home on the Range" column, make delicious dining for families.

On being a farm wife

—And other hazards

By JOYCE BUPP

"What is a mother?" I asked a third grade Sunday class some time ago.

Back came this all-knowing, understanding, and strikingly mature answer; "A mother is someone who loves you, no matter what you do."

Right. When you're happy and the world is rosy, a mother will share that warm feeling and rejoice in your gladness. And when all seems dark and the future holds little hope, she'll be there with all her strength and wisdom and love.

Mothers welcome you home after school, console you after a fight with your best friend, and put up with you when you've fallen in the creek, torn your new jeans and come trailing mud and tears through her newly-mopped kitchen.

Mothers can sometimes be found under beds hunting lost socks, helping to paint houses, furniture and bicycles, in trees rescuing stranded kittens and kites, and reading the same favorite story book to you six straight days in a row.

A single light burning late into the night may signal a mother sitting up with a feverish child, keeping watch for a teenager out on a date or hemming the costume needed for the school play the next day.

Thanks to mothers, the world knows PTA, nursery and Bible schools, 4-H, Scouts, chocolate chip cookies, homemade strawberry jam, hand knit sweaters and flower arrangements lovingly created from a handful of wilted wildflowers.

Mothers are capable of running automobiles, lawn mowers, farm and construction equipment, vacuum cleaners, sewing machines, typewriters, skateboards, an office staff, or a corporation board of directors.

While we honor her only one day each year, she's on duty at all times. And, while the job carries no paid vacations, pension funds, compensation, insurance or sick day leave, nevertheless there are other fringe benefits that can't be topped anywhere else.

May our society soon recognize, appreciate, and applaud that the most significant contribution a mother can make is the nurturing of solid, honest, responsible citizens who are interested in making this fragile earth a better place for us all.

God bless you, mothers everywhere!

CONGRATULATIONS GENE AND CAROL. WE LOVE YOU AND TRACY TOO.

Steam engines are a big feature at Rough and Tumble. A lot of them will be in action today as the organization's "Spring Steam Up" continues at the Rough and Tumble Engineers Association's Museum near Kinzer.

Rough & Tumble keeps steam alive

By DIETER KRIEG

KINZER – There's a unique museum near this small Lancaster County town, east of Lancaster, which keeps the "good old days" of steam power and threshing machines from becoming extinct. With a collection of antique engines and equipment and dedicated men who know their machines as well as their own name, the 6-acre site is rich in heritage and history.

In March of this year the 2000-member organization observed the 20th anniversary of "ground breaking" ceremonies at the present site, located along Route 30, east of Lancaster. The organization itself, however, dates back to 1947 when shop owner and mechanic Arthur Young of Kinzer was inspired by steam engine exhibitions he had seen in Ohio. Young is generally credited as being founder of the Rough and Tumble group. According to Rough and Tumble's own records, "a rather small show" was held at Young's Kinzer shop in 1947. "The idea received a lot of enthusiasm from local old-time threshermen," the group's 25-year history book says, adding that "it was decided by a group to perpetuate the past glories as an annual event.

From that humble beginning grew an organization which has come to be recognized for its dedicated and authentic endeavors with steam engines. The group sponsors no fewer than half a dozen "big events" each year, all of which are open to the public.

The Rough and Tumble Engineers Historical Association, Inc. will be celebrating its 30th Reunion in August. Although the Association is involved in numerous activities throughout the year, the annual reunion is the "icing on the cake." It runs for four days, drawing thousands of steam engine and antique farm machinery enthusiasts. Members of the group like to say it's an event which will be liked by anyone who has threshing dust in his blood. Appropriately enough, the huge event is known as the Threshermens' Reunion. Threshing with old machines driven by smoke-belching behemoths is perennially one of the highlighted activities.

Preparations for the August event are already underway. This weekend, in fact, is when the engineers are holding their annual Spring Steam Up. It began yesterday and continues through this afternoon. A variety of events will be featured which both farmers and the general public can find interest in. (Please see page 111 of last week's Lancaster Farming for details).

Membership in Rough and Tumble is open to anyone who has an interest in old machinery and engines. For a $5 annual membership fee, the card holder receives a monthly newsletter and free admission to Association-

Seventeen members attended the April meeting of Berks County Farm Women Society 5. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. James Hoover, Womelsdorf.

Program for the evening was a talk and demonstration on C.P.R., given by the hostess.

An invitation was received by the group to help Society 8 celebrate their tenth anniversary at the Shartlesville Grange Hall.

The group will hold a Mother and Daughter banquet at the Mt. Zion Lutheran Church, Mt. Zion, on May 26.

Plans to see a play during the month of June were discussed by the group.

The next meeting will be held following the Mother and Daughter banquet on May 26.

Lancaster Co. Society 6

Lancaster County Farm Women Society 6 met on May 6 at the Milton Grove Sportsmens Club. Guests with the group included county officers and eleven members of Society 26.

President Mrs. Saylor announced that Welsh Mountain Clinic was voted as the project for the county for the 1978 year.

John Spangler and Jim Gibble played banjo and guitar music for the program of the day. Fran Sauder gave a cake decorating demonstration, utilizing three different cakes.

Hostesses for the meeting, Mrs. Harry Shank, Mrs. William Thome, Mrs. Bernard Thome, and Mrs. Joseph Greiner, served refreshments to the group.

Lancaster Co. Society 13

At the April meeting of Lancaster County Farm Women Society 13, several items of business were discussed.

The group decided to support the Welsh Mountains Medical Center as the project for the year. Money was also sent to the Association for the Blind and the Heart Association.

A bake sale will be held at the East Towne Mall on May 26, beginning at 3 p.m.

half the confectioners' sugar. Put to one side. Meanwhile, beat the egg whites with the remaining confectioners' sugar until thick. Dampen a 9x5x3 inch loaf pan and sprinkle with the sugar. Stir the beaten egg whites into the wine mixture. Pour into the pan and put in the freezing compartment of the refrigerator. Freeze for 10 minutes then turn the sherbert into a bowl and beat for one minute. Return to the pan and freeze for a further 15 minutes. Beat again, and again after a further 25 minutes. Freeze for one hour, beat well, then freeze until solid. Remove the sherbet to soften slightly, then mix in the raspberry jam. Spoon into four tall glasses and serve. Serves four.

Corn post-emergence

When it's down to:

Which are you using?

For post-emergence weed control in corn . . . what if 2,4-D doesn't work? Like on smartweed.

Banvel herbicide, used alone or tank-mixed with 2,4-D, controls more broadleaf weeds than 2,4-D used alone.

So think Banvel:

. . . When you first see smartweed, velvetleaf, ragweed, cocklebur, pigweed, sunflower, morningglory, lambsquarters, Canada thistle seedlings.

. . . When you're planning to rotate to wheat or oats in the fall or soybeans next spring . . . because BANVEL DOES NOT CARRY OVER.

Heifer Project International aims for 150 head

This was the scene two years ago at the Clarence Keener, Jr., farm when a trailer-load of heifers departed for Little Rock, Ark., for Tanzania, Africa.

MANHEIM – Last year, the Lancaster, Chester, and Lebanon County district of Heifer Project International, a self-help program for needy people, shipped 145 head of dairy cattle to Tanzania. This year, says Clarence Keener, Sr., Manheim R1, chairman of the area committee for 10 years, the goal has risen to 150 head.

"Hopefully, we'll break that goal, again, like we did last year," Keener remarked in a telephone interview with Lancaster Farming. Last year's goal was 125 head, which they exceeded by 20 animals.

At present the animals and donations being collected are going to fill an order placed four years ago by the county of Tanzania. At that time, the government requested 1000 yearlings to build up herds where none had previously been established.

"Up to the time we started shipping cattle, they had never had fresh milk in Tanzania," clarified Keener. "Instead, they imported powdered milk which drained the economy. Now, the animals being shipped over are going to a 50,000 acre ranch, and, eventually, they want to start their own farms in the country."

The Tanzanian request is, at this time, over half completed with 600 animals shipped. This project is a typical example of how Heifer Project International works.

Heifer Project International began in 1944 when Dan West started it in the Church of the Brethren. The organization has since become international and non-denominational with civic groups and others taking part in completing the project. Since its inception, the organization has sent out over 40,000 animals and chicks to people in 90 foreign countries as well as states in the USA.

"In the past we have gotten great response," remarked Keener. "We find that people from all over the state are willing to give."

The idea behind HPI is to help the needy help themselves. The heifers going to underdeveloped countries around the world will be taken care of by families who will receive some instruction and training in husbandry and prior to the donation of the gift.

The countries receiving the heifers have to pay for some of the cost. They pay for the transportation charges, which in the case of Tanzania is air freight. Fortunately for the Tanzanians, the government ordered this project, and therefore, picks up the freight tab.

The volunteer committee members will soon be contacting farmers for their ideas on participating in the project. Donations are always welcome, although some heifers don't come absolutely free of charge. Handling costs are incurred as well. These expenses are raised by Bible Schools, churches, and other donations from various communities.

The animals sent from the Lancaster-Lebanon-Chester area are primarily heifers.

Former president of Rough and Tumble, C. Daniel Brubaker, shows off an old engine which is now owned by incumbent president Amos Stauffer.

Rough & Tumble

sponsored events, not including tractor pulls.

Tractor pulling, which has gained fantastically in popularity all over the country, was introduced to southeastern Pennsylvania by the Rough and Tumble group. They sponsored the first such event at their Museum grounds on October 24, 1970. All of the tractor pulls in the area were held at their facilities until 1974 when the official track at The Buck was built. The new track south of Lancaster is not affiliated with the Rough and Tumble organization, however.

The Rough and Tumble organization is what might be called a working museum. The machines and engines don't just stand there silently for people to look at. Pick a special event such as the Spring Steam Up and the Threshermen's Reunion and the whole place comes alive with activity. "Watch Our Smoke," is the organization's proud slogan.

While the Rough and Tumble organization is recording its own history, the town of Kinzer has a background which fits right in. The shop owned and operated by Arthur Young turned out threshers, balers, and steam boiler supplies for nearly half a century. The automatic self-tying baler was invented in Kinzer, records at Rough and Tumble claim, and numerous other machines "grew up" in the area.

The nucleus of the 2000-member organization is a group of officiers and a board of directors. Amos Stauffer, a mechanic, machinist and farm equipment dealer from New Holland, serves as president of the group. In his second year as head of the organization, Stauffer has also served three years as vice president and was on the board of directors three years prior to that.

The Rough and Tumble Engineers Historical Association is recognized as an educational and non-profit organization. Donations are tax deductible.

Add some wild geese, mallard ducks, Barbados sheep, and Manning's canine companion "Big Red", an old ore mine now filled with water, a picnic grove in a rustic setting, the sounds of hundreds of gentle birds chirping among the trees, and the friendly grandfatherly character of Elra Manning and you have the complete inventory of this unmechanized, uncomputerized Quail Farm.

IRRIGATION SYSTEM

A traveling-type irrigation system is being introduced by Long Mfg. N.C. Inc. The Long Nu-Way irrigation unit can sprinkle an area up to 2000 feet by 320 feet without moving from one hydrant location. The unit can be towed by a tractor or pick-up truck. The Nu-Way can deliver up to 550 gallons per minute and can irrigate up to 16 acres with one inch of water using only ¾ man-hours of labor, the manufacturer claims.

Crops help to clean air

NORRISTOWN – Plants help in purifying the air, and an average acre of corn gives off enough oxygen during its growing season to supply 12 persons with fresh air for a whole year. And if the corn is fertilized to produce 150 bushels per acre, the same acre of lush green crop adds enough oxygen for an additional six people.

Farm crops also clean the air people breathe by absorbing carbon dioxide. While an acre of corn is producing oxygen, it draws into its tissues almost eight tons of carbon dioxide waste during the season. Similar air purification is performed by other crops.

Farm crops help in other ways to clean the air, as do trees. Cities especially are helped by the ability of plants to catch loose particles from the air. These particles are caught in the fine hairs on plant leaves and stems, where the dirt is held until rain washes it off into the ground.

In some cities, trees trap so much dirt from the air they must be cleaned with detergents.

TIPS FOR SEWING WITH SHIRRED FABRICS

Fabric stores are filled with pre-shirred fabrics for "instant dresses." These fabrics are very easy to sew, however, I would like to share the following tips which I am sure you will find helpful.

It is easier to cut the fabric accurately if pattern pieces are cut from a single layer of fabric. The parallel rows of elasticized stiching can be used as a guide for placing pattern pieces cut out on the lengthwise grain. Strong, stretchable thread such as polyester or cotton wrapped polyester should be used. Use 10-12 stitches per inch and either a straight or a narrow width zigzag stitch. Ball-point needles should be used, especially on knit fabric. They can be used both in the shirring area and on the flat fabric.

The need for seam finishes depends on the particular fabric being used. Knit fabric may not need a finish. Woven fabric can be zigzagged or zigzag both seam allowances together and trim close to the stitching. Shirred fabric should not be turned under for a clean finish as this creates too much bulk, especially in the shirred area. For some fabrics a bound seam allowance might be appropriate, provided a very lightweight substance is used for the binding.

For a neat finish at the top of the main seam, turn the top edges of the seam allowance under diagonally and tack to the seam allowance.

In addition to instant dresses, pattern catalogs feature many patterns using the pre-shirred fabric. When purchasing the fabric, it is very important to buy fabric with the right amount of stretch for the pattern.

THE PERFECT FOOD?

Milk is a basic food that everyone in the family needs every day. An excellent source of calcium, milk also has generous amounts of protein that builds and repairs body tissues, helps the body fight infections, and supplies energy. It is also rich in riboflavin, a B vitamin that helps keep skin healthy and vision clear.

Milk lends itself to a variety of uses and, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), is now in especially strong supply.

So, drink up, and try milk in any one of the following interesting combinations. If your children are getting bored with the traditional milk and cookies after school, why not try cherry-chocolate milk? For six servings, combine 1½ quarts milk, ½ cup of drained juice from a jar of maraschino cherries, 6 of the cherries, ½ cup chocolate syrup and 1½ cups instant nonfat dry milk. Whirl in the blender and serve very cold. For a minted variation on this basic recipe, simply substitute ¼ teaspoon of peppermint extract for the cherry juice and ⅓ cup crushed peppermint candy for the cherries.

Milk and cream are also basic ingredients in creative cookery. Try any one – or both – of the following soup recipes for satisfying nutritious meals.

Tomato Bisque

2 cups canned tomatoes
½ teaspoon baking soda
1½ tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
3½ cups milk
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped

Mash tomatoes with a fork to break up large pieces. Simmer for 15 to 20 minutes. Stir in baking soda, sugar, and salt; blend well. Melt butter in a 2-quart saucepan. Blend in flour. Stir in 1½ cups milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Stir in tomato mixture, remaining milk, pepper, and parsley. Heat over low heat just until simmering. Yield: 6 servings, 1 cup each.

Cream Of Pea Soup

2 packages frozen peas
3 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup boiling water
1½ tablespoons butter
3 cups milk, whole or skim
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt

Wagners recognized for 31 years of business

QUARRYVILLE – Thee generations of farm mortgage correspondents in the Wagner family of Quarryville were honored at a dinner at Rhoads Restaurant, here, recently by The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States Farm Mortgage Department. All three men are associated with the Wagner Realty Company of Quarryville.

Judson E. Wagner, left, made the first Equitable farm mortage in Lancaster County 31 years ago. With him are son, Emory, and grandson, Dwight. All are associated with the Wagner Realty Co. of Quarryville.

When approached by Equitable in 1947 to place loans, the elder Wagner did not think he could place any. But to make a start, he made a loan on his own farm south of Quarryville for $12000, and another to his son Emory the same day for $7000. This was the beginning of a 31 year farm lending involving millions of dollars, $5,000,000 of which was loaned over the past five years. Today, according to area loan manager Clifford B. Huffman, the company has some $13,000,000 on the books in Lancaster County; $25,000,000 in Southeastern Pennsylvania.

Emory D. Wagner's office handles collections for about $6,000,000 of Equitable's loans in southern Lancaster County and ranks first in the East for farm loan correspondents for Equitable. Equitable is the only life insurance company making farm loans in Pennsylvania, and ranked first in the nation for farm lending among life insurance companies in 1977.

Attending the dinner for Equitable, along with area loan manager Huffman, 1050 Sylvan Road, Lancaster, were Norman G. Yergen of Chicago, director of Farm Services, and James H. Reynolds, retiring director of Farm Services, and area loan manager Russell J. Grubb of New Jersey.

Holstein cow honored

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. – A registered Holstein cow owned by Rhelda E. Royer, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, has produced lifetime milk production credits of more than 200,000 lbs. of milk.

The cow, Blossomelle Ivanhoe Jerry 6366596-VG, joins a select group of cows to be recognized as "Iron Grandmas" by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America. At the age of 12 years 4 month, her lifetime output stands at 204,770 lbs. of milk and 7,885 lbs. of butterfat. The cow's highest record in a single year was started at the age of 7 years 8 months. Milked twice daily for 365 days, she produced 29,396 lbs. of milk and 1,067 lbs. of butterfat.

"Jerry" was bred in the herd of her present owner. She was sired by Tidy Burke Jerry 1300014-EX.

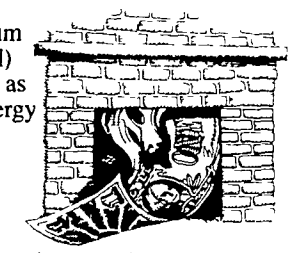
Considering the cost of oil, gas and electric heat these days, it's easy to see why hundreds of thousands of homeowners across North America have turned to wood heating



It's more economical (it can trim 50% or more off your heating bill) Wood smells and sounds as good as it burns And it's one form of energy that's still growing

But what do you burn wood in to get the most heat out of it? We'd like to suggest a Fisher Stove

The Fisher's unique two-step combustion chamber recirculates wood gases back into the flames, resulting in more heat and fewer ashes Its patented spin draft controls and virtually airtight construction mean you can regulate how much heat it puts out And because it's made from carefully welded, heavy plate steel, it will give you years of remarkable heating efficiency

Tractor pulling attracts royalty

By DIETER KRIEG

NEW HOLLAND – When American-style tractor pulling contests were introduced in The Netherlands last Fall, guards on horseback were needed to help control curious crowds and pulling demonstration had to be called off numerous times in order to clear the track of enthusiastic onlookers. Interest was so great that the Americans could hardly get off their machines once they stopped because people swarmed around them in such great density. Even Prince Klaus, a member of the Dutch Royal Family, came out to greet the U.S. visitors and inspect their fantastically powerful machines.

The man who is credited for having made many of the connections between the U.S. and Holland in order to introduce tractor pulling to Europe is Ivan Glick of Sperry-New Holland Corporation. He reportedly contacted fellow Lancaster Countians Lester Houck and Mark Stauffer to see if they'd be interested in traveling across the Atlantic with their machines. Both men accepted the invitation and challenge.

Tractor pulling

The underlying reason to bring tractor pulling to The Netherlands was to bolster interest in the World Plowing Contest, which was being held in that country last Fall. The general consensus was that a lively and noisy tractor pulling demonstration from America could give the event a needed "shot in the arm."

It did just that. Officials for the plowing contest expected no more than 20,000 people to show up for the 2-day event. As it turned out, 28,000 were counted in on the first day, and 53,000 jammed the area on the second day.

Lester Houck, one of the pioneers of tractor pulling in Lancaster County and incumbent secretary of the National Tractor Pullers Association (NTPA), remembers the preparations that were involved in making the 4000-mile trans-oceanic journey.

With tractor pulling being something totally new in Europe, the Dutch organizers needed a sled. A fully equipped and weighted sled weighs 53,000 pounds – which made for quite a shipping order. The Lancaster Countians stripped the sled of the weight box and sent specifications to have an identical one built by the Dutch. That cut the weight of the sled in half and reduced shipping costs to $20,000. Once it arrived in Holland, the newly constructed and properly weighted box was fit onto the sled and the contraption was ready for action. Lancaster Countian Dan Brubaker

Although my parents' room was only separated from mine by a wall, you had to wind through all the upstairs rooms in between to get from the one place to the other. As a result, there were times when I could feel pretty isolated from the rest of the family.

Sometimes late at night or early in the morning I would wake up and all would be quiet. In my childish mind, I would wonder if I was suddenly all alone in the world.

Immediately I would lean out of bed and pound my clenched fist against the wall bordering my parents' room. I wanted assurance that not everyone had gone off and left me.

In a few seconds, my knock would be answered by my mother's gentle tapping on the thick boards. No matter what time of the day or night, she never failed to hear my anxious summons, and would soothe my fearful thoughts with her quiet rapping that all was well.

Of course there were other times when she would thump on the wall to rouse me out of bed, or summon me to her rooom for questioning of some dire deed I was suspected of doing, but all my life I will remember those taps that reassured me that all in the world was as it should be.

Salute to you, Mother. Though never mentioned, it will be the little things you do that are long remembered.

came along to be in charge of sled adjustments and operations.

The Dutch had some of their own tractors readied for pulling contests, but none like the two brought over from America at a cost of $6000. Houck had brought over his twin Dodge powered mechanical monster and fellow Lancaster Countian Mark Stauffer was there with his air-cooled Deutz, a German tractor. Stauffer hails from New Holland and is associated with Stauffer Diesel, Inc., a Deutz dealership. The family has three Deutz tractors entered regularly in tractor pulling contests and they have had the distinction of winning several national championships with their powerful machines.

"Interest was fantastic," Houck recalls. Serving as secretary of NTPA, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Tractor Pullers Association (PTPA), and being an active tractor puller himself, Houck is very knowledgeable on the subject of tractor pulling. In addition to his responsibilities with the above named organizations, he is owner and farm director of the Agri-Broadcasting Network, a New Holland-headquartered business with 15 subscribing stations in Pennsylvania. Daily market reports are a specialty.

The pull last Fall in Holland was the first such event ever held in Europe. From that enthusiastic beginning has sprung a phenomenon which is spreading throughout other western European countries like wildfire. Houck notes that six tractor pulls will be held in The Netherlands this year and Germany has scheduled two. The new attraction gets top billing in popular farm magazines such as Germany's Top Agrar and Holland's Boerdery. Both have devoted numerous pages, complete with color photographs, to the new sport. The Boerdery, is a weekly farm magazine which more than 80 per cent

Tractor pulling contests fascinate European as well as American audiences. Les Houck, one of several men in Lancaster County who helped introduce the sport in Europe last Fall, reviews some of the top national magazines which cover pulling events with unabashed enthusiasm and plenty of color photographs.

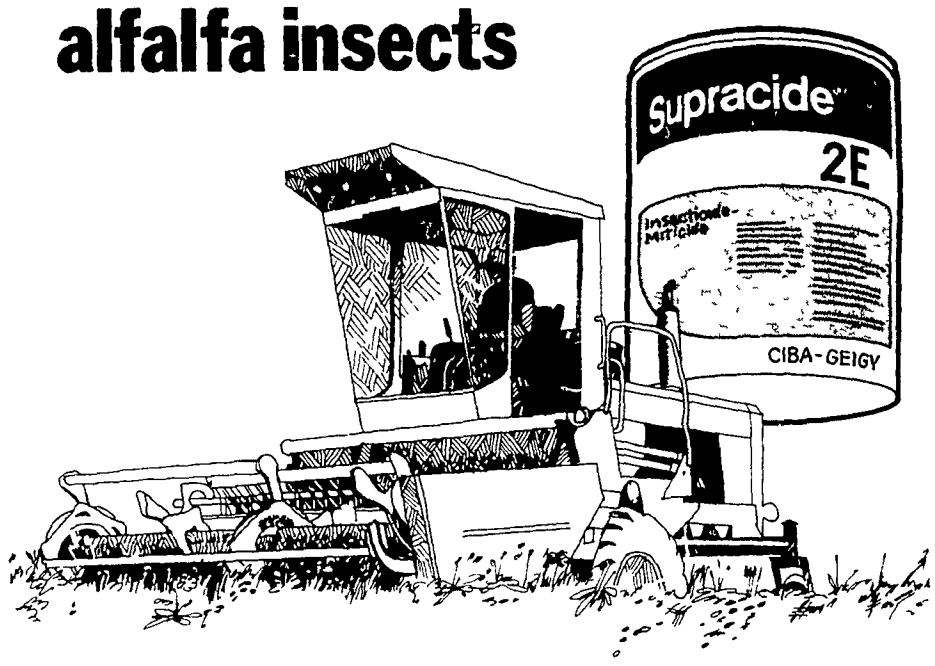
OUR RECOMMENDATION:
for alfalfa insects



You know how much a good crop of alfalfa is worth today. It's never been higher . . You'd like to grow more of it per acre. Insect control plays an important role.

Supracide is what to use. Why? 14 to 21 days of control, for one thing. Short interval to harvest, for another. These are only two reasons to use Supracide on your high-priced alfalfa. Ask us about some others.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The old saying that everything has two sides is only too true. If we have an argument and point a finger at someone, we hardly realize that we are pointing three fingers at ourselves. It isn't always "you" who are at fault, we all must share blame for situations.

We rationalize in other areas besides human relations. Sometimes, it is difficult to ascertain our real beliefs and desires. Simply making decisions in certain areas can be tiring. My problem at present is whether to use my few antiques or simply put them on a shelf and look at them. I've heard arguments on both sides and most folks say use and enjoy them

However, in doing this I've run into trouble. First, a very large brown jug on our front porch got broken during the Winter when snow was being swept Then, I lost my balance and broke a valuable old basket, which was unique for being quite tiny and in perfect condition. It is broken beyond repair. And to top the list, an electrician kicked over a redware crock and it too became 20 pieces in no time at all. What to do – why, some dishes are becoming so expensive that one may hardly pick them up to admire them.

Our daughter loves to settle into a corner somewhere and read a book. She averages several books a week, while I say, "Hoe the strawberries" or "Clean the rabbit pen." To make up for these periods of quiet, she keeps me busy taking her to the many activities and interests that she has.

If you are in a musical, you practice. If you are in a bell choir, you practice. And the same goes for a concert, a choir and taking flute lessons. Then there are school dances to attend, all-day athletic events to compete in and parties in the evening. I haven't even mentioned being president of the 4-H Community Club and carrying seven different projects.

She doesn't allow me to settle into a comfortable, slowed-down pace in my middle-age years. And when her brother goes to Penn State in the Fall, there will be one less chauffeur to cater to her desires.

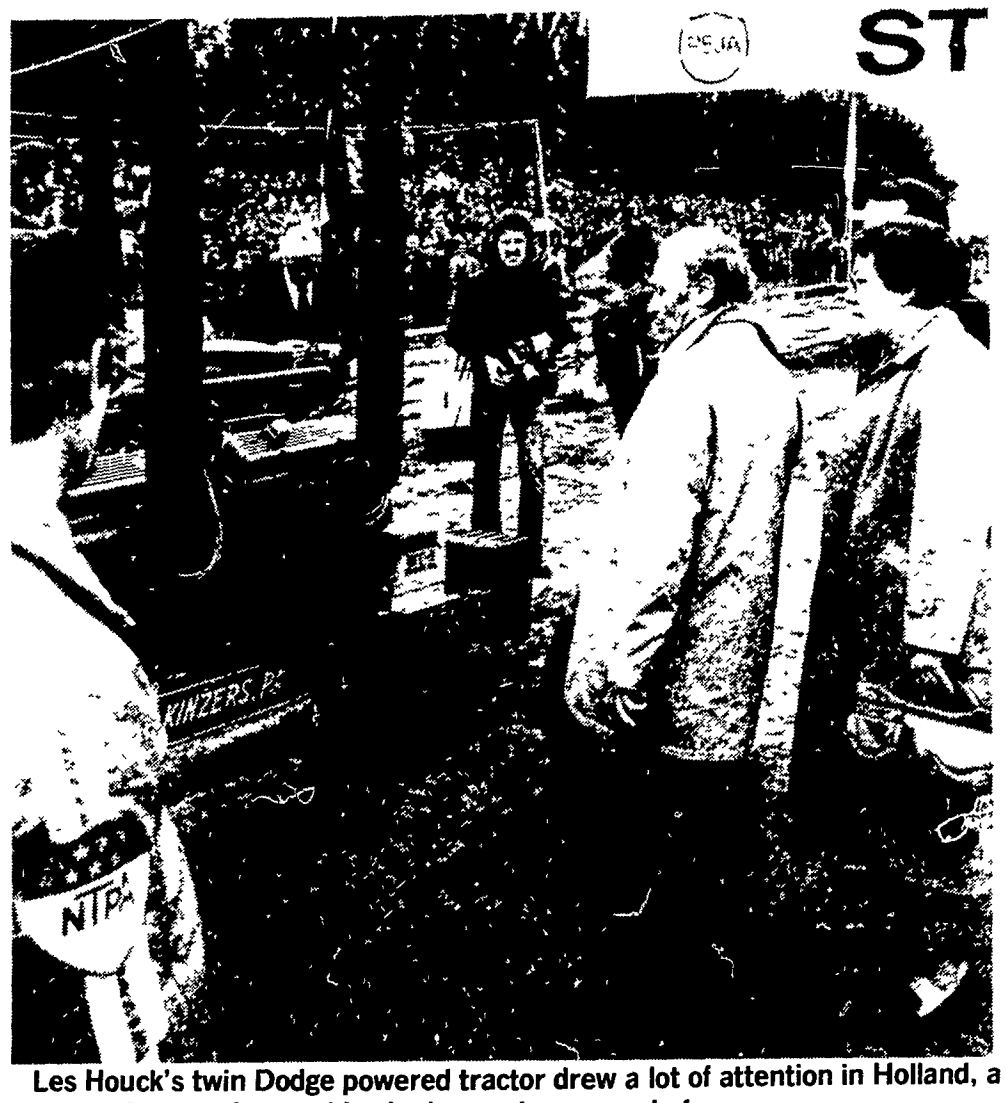
Tractor pulling

Prince Klaus of the Netherlands, left, accepts a handful of National Tractor Pullers Association caps from Les Houck, who serves as secretary of the U.S. organization. Houck was in the Netherlands last Fall to help introduce tractor pulling to Europe.



Les Houck's twin Dodge powered tractor drew a lot of attention in Holland, a country where such a machine had never been seen before.

of Dutch farmers subscribe to.

Tractor pulling in the United States is growing by leaps and bounds as well. Houck notes that northeastern Pennsylvania is presently experiencing its biggest expansion program, although growth and participation is evident nearly everywhere. Crowds of spectators are becoming larger also. "It has grown fantastically," the national secretary says.

A new season of tractor pulling in Pennsylvania began last week. Tonight (May 13) at 7 p.m. the Buck Tractor Pulling Stadium, south of Lancaster, will open its gates for the first time since last Autumn. Other localities have their own pulls. Later this month a national tractor pull will take place at Grantville, where Muncy Chief Hybrids is putting up a $24,100 purse.

Tractor pulling is on the way up -- whether it's here, or in faraway places such as Holland.

Milk promoted

LEWISBURG – This past Winter, the Lewisburg Young Farmers Association decided that they wanted to promote an American-made product. The item that they chose was milk.

Recently, at a teachers in-service day held at the local high school, the dairy committee arranged to serve milk and cookies to the faculty instead of the usual drinks.

Serving on the committee were Faye Crissell, Karne Kratzer, Pat Walter, and Dorothy Rishel.

The idea of the milk break was well received by the faculty.

Farm Bureau outlines swine program goals

PARK RIDGE, Ill. – The American Farm Bureau Federation will continue vigorous efforts to control and erradicate pseudorabies, brucellosis and tuberculosis in swine. Farm Bureau favors the continued use of antibiotics and sulfa drugs in animal feeds and nitites in bacon and other cured meats unless such use is found detrimental to human health by competent research. Support is also being given to development of a standardized voluntary system of selling hogs on a grade and yield basis.

The decisions were made by the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors after studying recommendations of the AFBF Swine Advisory Committee.

Farm Bureau also asks for funding to be restored in the proposed USDA fiscal year '79 budget for use in determining the incidence, conomic impact and procedures for control and eradication of pseudorabies to at least budget levels of the previous year. Some 1256 cases of pseudorabies were reported in 1977 by state animal health officials in 23 states.

Based on other actions, the AFBF has contacted USDA and FDA officials involved to point out the growing concern among farmers and ranchers with respect to government proposals and regulations which are detrimental and costly to the livestock industry and consumers as well. It was pointed out that an educational program is being carried out by many county and state Farm Bureaus and their affiliated livestock marketing and supply cooperatives which stresses the importance of adherence to proper withdrawal periods for sulfas and other drugs and the thorough cleaning of feed-mixing equipment when shifting from medicated to non-medicated feeds. This program includes meetings, news articles, brochures, etc.

Because of problems producers have had with the sulfa residue monitoring program the following suggested actions have been provided to the USDA and FDA for consideration:

1. The USDA should identify Swine, at the initial point of delivery, that are to be tested for possible sulfa residue violations. (We believe this is necessary because of errors in identifying the owners of swine found to be in violation of residue tolerances.)

2. A producer's option to also submit test samples and a mandatory requirement that the USDA Meat Inspection Division retain sample material should be established.

3. A system of recourse for producers for errors made in the USDA residue monitoring program should be developed.

It was pointed out that AFBF would support a workable identification program for market swine when accurate testing procedures and reasonable tolerance levels for residues (based on sound scientific research approved by a panel representing the industry) are developed and implemented. (AFBF policy on identification states that identification must be coupled with a disease eradication program and indemnification where needed.)

A coordinated program of scheduling swine producers to testify at field hearings related to drug withdrawal periods, antibiotics, sulfas, and the use of nitrites in meat products will be utilized.

Among other topics on which the Board took actions were dietary goals, revised grades for barrows and gilts, USDA's net weight labeling proposal and southeast live hog futures delivery point.

WHAT'S NEW

TWO-WAY HEATER

The time proven E.F.M. Stoker Boiler has been redesigned into a dual-fuel unit combining the economy of coal with the convenience of oil.

This universal heat machine will now make it possible to be independent of possible coal or oil shortages and in a matter of minutes can switch from coal to oil or oil to coal without removing the stoker or the oil burner. A unique lock safe gate will prevent the oil burner from operating until the gate is in a total open position.

The boiler is a down-draft plate flue design. The stoker, using rice size anthracite coal automatically removes coal from the bin and deposits the ash into a container in the dust tight base. The oil burner is 3450 RPM retention head with split second safety control.

Sheep programs outlined by Farm Bureau

PARK RIDGE, Ill. – The American Farm Bureau Federation is stepping up efforts to encourage an increase in sheep numbers in the United States. To do this, Farm Bureau will explore methods of increasing the importation of improved breeding stock, reduce losses from coyotes (the major cause of the decline of the sheep industry) and support sheep and lamb research and promotion.

The decisions were made by the American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors after studying recommendations of the AFBF Sheep Advisory Committee.

Farm Bureau also will encourage young farmers and ranchers to be more aware of the potential for establishing profitable sheep production and feeding operations as a farm and ranch enterprise and supports the "sheep industry" Blueprint for Expansion program. AFBF will work with the USDA and other interested organizations in 1978 to expand the importation of sheep breeding stock and encourage updating of the rules and regulations governing importations.

In other actions, the AFBF Board supports work to defeat legislation now pending in Congress which would further contribute to expansion of coyote and other predator numbers. This includes the Predator Conservation Act and the Anti-Poisoning Act which are supported by environmentalists. Farm Bureau will also continue efforts to encourage appropriate governmental agencies to reinstate the use of M-44 coyote getters and 1080 by sheep producers. These control devices remain the best proven methods of predator control and their humane aspects have been documented. Accelerated research into new methods of controlling and repelling predators will also continue to be supported.

Farm Bureau will expand efforts to promote the showing of the film "The Lost Sheep", produced by the AFBF, to civic organizations, other clubs, schools, on television, etc. to tell the predator - vs. sheep story to urban audiences.

In other actions, the AFBF Board supports passage of the coming Sheep and Wool Referendum scheduled for June of 1978, encourages the development of alternative sheep and lamb marketing systems such as the tel-o-sale and urges members to participate in present cooperative livestock marketing programs. Farm Bureau also supports efforts to increase the proportion of wool marketed by grower-owned associations.

Among other subjects on which the Board took action after studying the committee's recommendations were labor problems, public lands, USDA proposed meat grading changes, lamb and wool imports, lamb grading, research and efforts to determine ownership of coyotes and other predators.

Land development meeting opposition

CHICAGO, Ill. – Increased government regulation and public sentiment against further growth and development will make it increasingly difficult to convert farmland to other uses in the future, an environmental and planning consultant recently told realtors attending the May meetings of the National Association of Realtors and its affiliates.

Speaking at a session of the Farm and Land Institute, an association affiliate, Robert B. Teska, founder of the Evanston consulting firm of Robert B. Teska Associates, said anti-growth sentiment usually espouses one of two philosophies.

"There are the 'small is beautiful' advocates and those who say that 'the last one in closes the door,'" he said.

John W. King

The last residents to move into a community are often the strongest advocates for maintaining the status quo, he added.

Developers and individual property owners also face a "permit explosion," with government at all levels requiring growing number of increasingly complex permits that "sometimes virtually prohibit the average property owner from making even normal maintenance and repairs," Teska said.

Other challenges facing developers or owners of property include finding land suitable for developing, determining ways to use the land creatively, and dealing effectively with local bureaucracy, he said.

"Finding the land is no small problem," Teska said. "You can no longer depend on the nearest municipality to annex the property, nor on the most appropriate special district to extend its services," he added.

Some developers increase their costs but reduce the risk of not being able to obtain sewer, water and other services by buying more expensive vacant land in areas that already have such services, he said.

There are usually several appropriate uses for a piece of property, and often several can be accommodated simultaneously, Teska suggested.

For example, a portion of land for a housing developer might be held in collective ownership and retained as a forest preserve, appeasing advocates of open space and other environmental causes and allowing the developer some tax advantages.

To deal most effectively with the maze of government requirements and municipal officials, developers should support rational planning at all levels of government based on sound professional input – including their own, Teska said.

King named Colonial distributor

DOUGLASVILLE – John M. Hanson, district manager for Colonial Products, has announced that John W. King, Wagontown, Pa., Chester County, has been named exclusive distributor of Colonial heavy duty property maintenance products. King has had experience handling Colonial products since 1975, although inactive until recently.

Rutters host 4-Meeting

YORK – The Rutter family of York hosted the April 18 meeting of the White Rose Dairy Club.

During the program Extension agent David Norman explained the proper procedures of filling out dairy club record books. Barry Lehman presented a demonstration on dehorning a calf, and Debbie Lehman demonstrated how to clean calves' ears.

The next regularly scheduled meeting was held on May 9 at the Rutter farm. Members studied techniques of showing dairy animals, and practiced working with calves. Tim Rutter was in charge of a demonstration.

WHAT'S NEW

NARROW LOADERS

Three Sperry New Holland skid-steer loader models now are available in a new "narrow package" to permit use in tight and congested areas where access is a primary concern.

The new narrow package, which features a 47-inch-wide utility bucket, is available on the 22-horsepower model L-325 and the 30 - horsepower models L-425 and L-445. Both the models L-325 and L-425 are equipped with gasoline engines and the L-445 can be equipped with a gasoline or diesel engine

In addition to the 47-inch wide bucket, the narrow package includes 5.70-15 chevron-tread tires and wheels and redesign of the boom hose fittings to conform to the new configuration

The new configuration, which reduces bucket width by seven inches, is designed to permit loader use in and around buildings with narrow aisles, passageways or doorways The reduced width also permits transporting the loader in a pickup truck

Operating loads (SAE) are unchanged for the three loader models with the narrow package – 900 pounds for the L-325 and 1000 pounds for the L-425 and L-445 The quick-attach mounting plate now is standard on the L-325, as it has been on all other models

AFBF pushing beef research

PARK RIDGE, Ill. – The American Farm Bureau Federation board of directors has directed the Federation to continue to work with other organizations to achieve common objectives for strengthening beef research and promotion, including possible amendments to the Beef Research and Information Act passed by Congress in 1976.

Farm Bureau policy calls for the following two changes in the Beef Research and Information Act:

1. An amendment to provide that for a beef referendum to be valid 50 per cent of the registered producers must have noted with a majority – rather than two-thirds casting an affirmative vote.

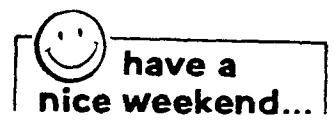
2. An amendment to provide that no producer shall be required to sign his or her ballot in a beef referendum.

AFBF recognizes the immediate need of funding for beef research and information and the time required for consideration and implementation of the Beef Research and Information Act and is encouraging a uniform voluntary beef collection rate at the state level of 25 cents per head with a minimum of 10 cents per head to be contributed to the National Live Stock and Meat Board for the national program.

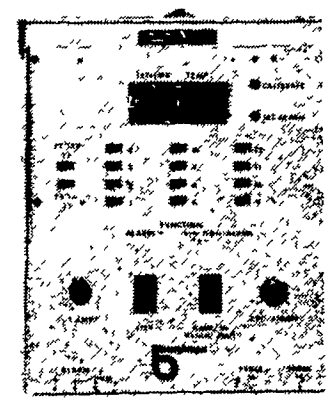
Farm Bureau also will intensify efforts to expand export markets for livestock and livestock products including continued membership in the U.S. Meat Export Federation.

In other actions, based on recommendations of its Beef Cattle Advisory Committee, the AFBF board of directors supported further research concerning beef production and marketing cycles to determine what Farm Bureau might do to control these cycles or protect members from harmful consequences. This work should include a feasibility study of a computerized reporting system to inform producers of trends and cattle cycles, in an effort to bring stability to the cattle industry.

Among other topics on which the Board took action after studying the committee's recommendations were government involvement in the livestock industry, meat pricing, dietary goals, futures markets, imports, exports, USDA proposed changed in meat grading, mechanical deboning, antibiotics, sulfas and nitrites.



WHAT'S NEW



GRAIN TEMPERATURE MONITORING SYSTEM

Baughman-Oster, Inc., Taylorville, Ill., has introduced a new Grain Temperature Monitoring System that continuously checks the temperature of grain at different levels in virtually any size storage bin.

The main components of the system are sensing cables and a display console. The sensing cables are suspended from the bin roof by means of a roof-plate and hanger assembly that relieves excessive roof loads. A single cable may contain as many as six sensors. The display console mounts on the outside of the bin. A probe for manual checks is also included.

The display console contains a digital readout which can be used to automatically scan the temperatures throughout the bin. Individual selector switches also allow the operator to check the temperature at any given sensor location. A light or other alarm device can be programmed to warn when the temperature rises above a set point anywhere in the bin.

For further information, contact Tom Coulson, Baughman-Oster, Inc., Route 48 West, Taylorville, Illinois 62568.

Bracketed milk price system denied

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Under a U.S. Department of Agriculture recommended decision issued recently, the current method of pricing Class I - or fluid use - milk under the Middle Atlantic federal milk marketing order will be continued.

Herbert L. Forest, dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the tentative decision denies a proposal for a bracketed pricing system and proposals to lower the Class I differential from its present $2.78.

The present method of pricing Class I milk under the order, Forest said, is a basic formula, plus the $2.78 Class I differential. The Minnesota-Wisconsin price serves as the basic formula price under the Middle Atlantic order.

Maintaining this pricing method is essential, Forest said, because the Middle Atlantic price formula is an integral part of a coordinated pricing system for federal milk orders. This coordination is needed to keep Class I prices aligned among handlers on a continuing basis, and to permit milk to move easily among order markets.

This recommendation, as well as other provisions of the tentative decision, is based on evidence received at a public hearing in Philadelphia last October. The U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in the Abbotts Dairies case, directed USDA to hold a hearing to determine what method of pricing Class I milk should be used in the order.

Other recommended changes would relax provisions for pooling a distributing plant and for diverting producers' milk to nonpool plants when it is not needed for fluid use at a distributing plant. Milk production has increased significantly over the past two years, Forest said, and these changes are needed to assure that producers who regularly supply the market do not lone producer status.

Another change would allow operators of partially regulated plants to increase Class I sales in the Middle Atlantic order area to a limited extent without becoming fully regulated under the order.

The recommended decision was published in the April 27 Federal Register, and comments will be accepted until May 12. After all comments are evaluated, USDA will issue a final decision. For the changes to go into effect, at least two-thirds of the producers operating under the order must approve.

Comments should be sent, in four copies, to the Hearing Clerk, Rm. 107-so. Bldg., USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250, where anyone may review these.

Engineer honored

NEW HOLLAND -- Lawrence H. Skromme, Sperry New Holland vice president for engineering, has been elected to the National Academy of Engineering of the U.S.A. He was among only 100 engineers admitted to the academy this year. Also included in the new members was Neil Armstrong, former astronaut, who was the first person to walk on the moon.

Lawrence H. Skromme

Election to the academy is the highest professional distinction that can be conferred upon an engineer. Membership in the academy honors those who have made important contributions to engineering theory and practice or who have demonstrated unusual accomplishments in the pioneering of new and developing fields of technology.

The first practical application of fluorescent lighting was made at a Washington, D.C., dinner in Nov. 1936, celebrating the centenary of the U.S. Patent Office.

ATROPHIC RHINITIS CAN BE PREVENTED!

Presently the loss of U.S. Swine is approximately 150,000,000 due to Atrophic Rhinitis and its complications.

Chromalloy Animal Health has developed the first U.S.D.A. Licensed vaccine to control this costly disease.

The Herd Health Program consists of vaccinating the sow with two injections 4 weeks and 2 weeks prior to breeding and the baby pigs at 7 and 28 days of age.

"HARVEST BOSS" COMBINE

The new Model 8900 "Harvest Boss" combine from White Farm Equipment Company features distinctive new styling and offers many new high production features such as a 170-bushel, center-fill grain tank; hydraulic swing, turrent unloading system; triple disc hydraulic brakes and hydrostatic transmissions as standard equipment, says White Farm Equipment Company, a subsidiary of White Motor Corporation.

The cab of the new 8900 is isolated from the combine frame to provide maximum operator comfort against sound and vibration. The engine is shock-mounted for quieter operation.

The operator's area includes a new deluxe seat with folding armrests and adjustable backrest, tinted glass, heater and air conditioner with high-capacity pressurizer, tilting roof for ease of service, fire extinguisher, door lock, cigar lighter and ashtray.

Optional equipment includes a grain loss monitor; a new variable speed reel drive with automatic or manual reel indexing; windshield wiper and a wide choice of radio equipment.

All-new instrumentation includes a 13-channel monitor for continuous surveillance of clean grain elevator drive, return elevator drive, straw walker drive, straw walker overload, cleaning fan drive, shoe drive, crop chopper drive, engine oil filter restriction, coolant level, coolant temperature, voltage, fuel level and parking brake.

A six-channel digital readout enables the operator to monitor cleaning fan speed, cylinder speed, engine speed, ground speed, voltage and fuel level.

The following operational functions can be performed from inside the cab while harvesting: change cleaning fan speed, cylinder speed, ground speed, reel height and speed, head height, concave adjustment and unload the grain bin.

White's 8900 Harvest Boss features four headlights, a grain bin light, an unloader tube light, directional lights and four way safety flashers.

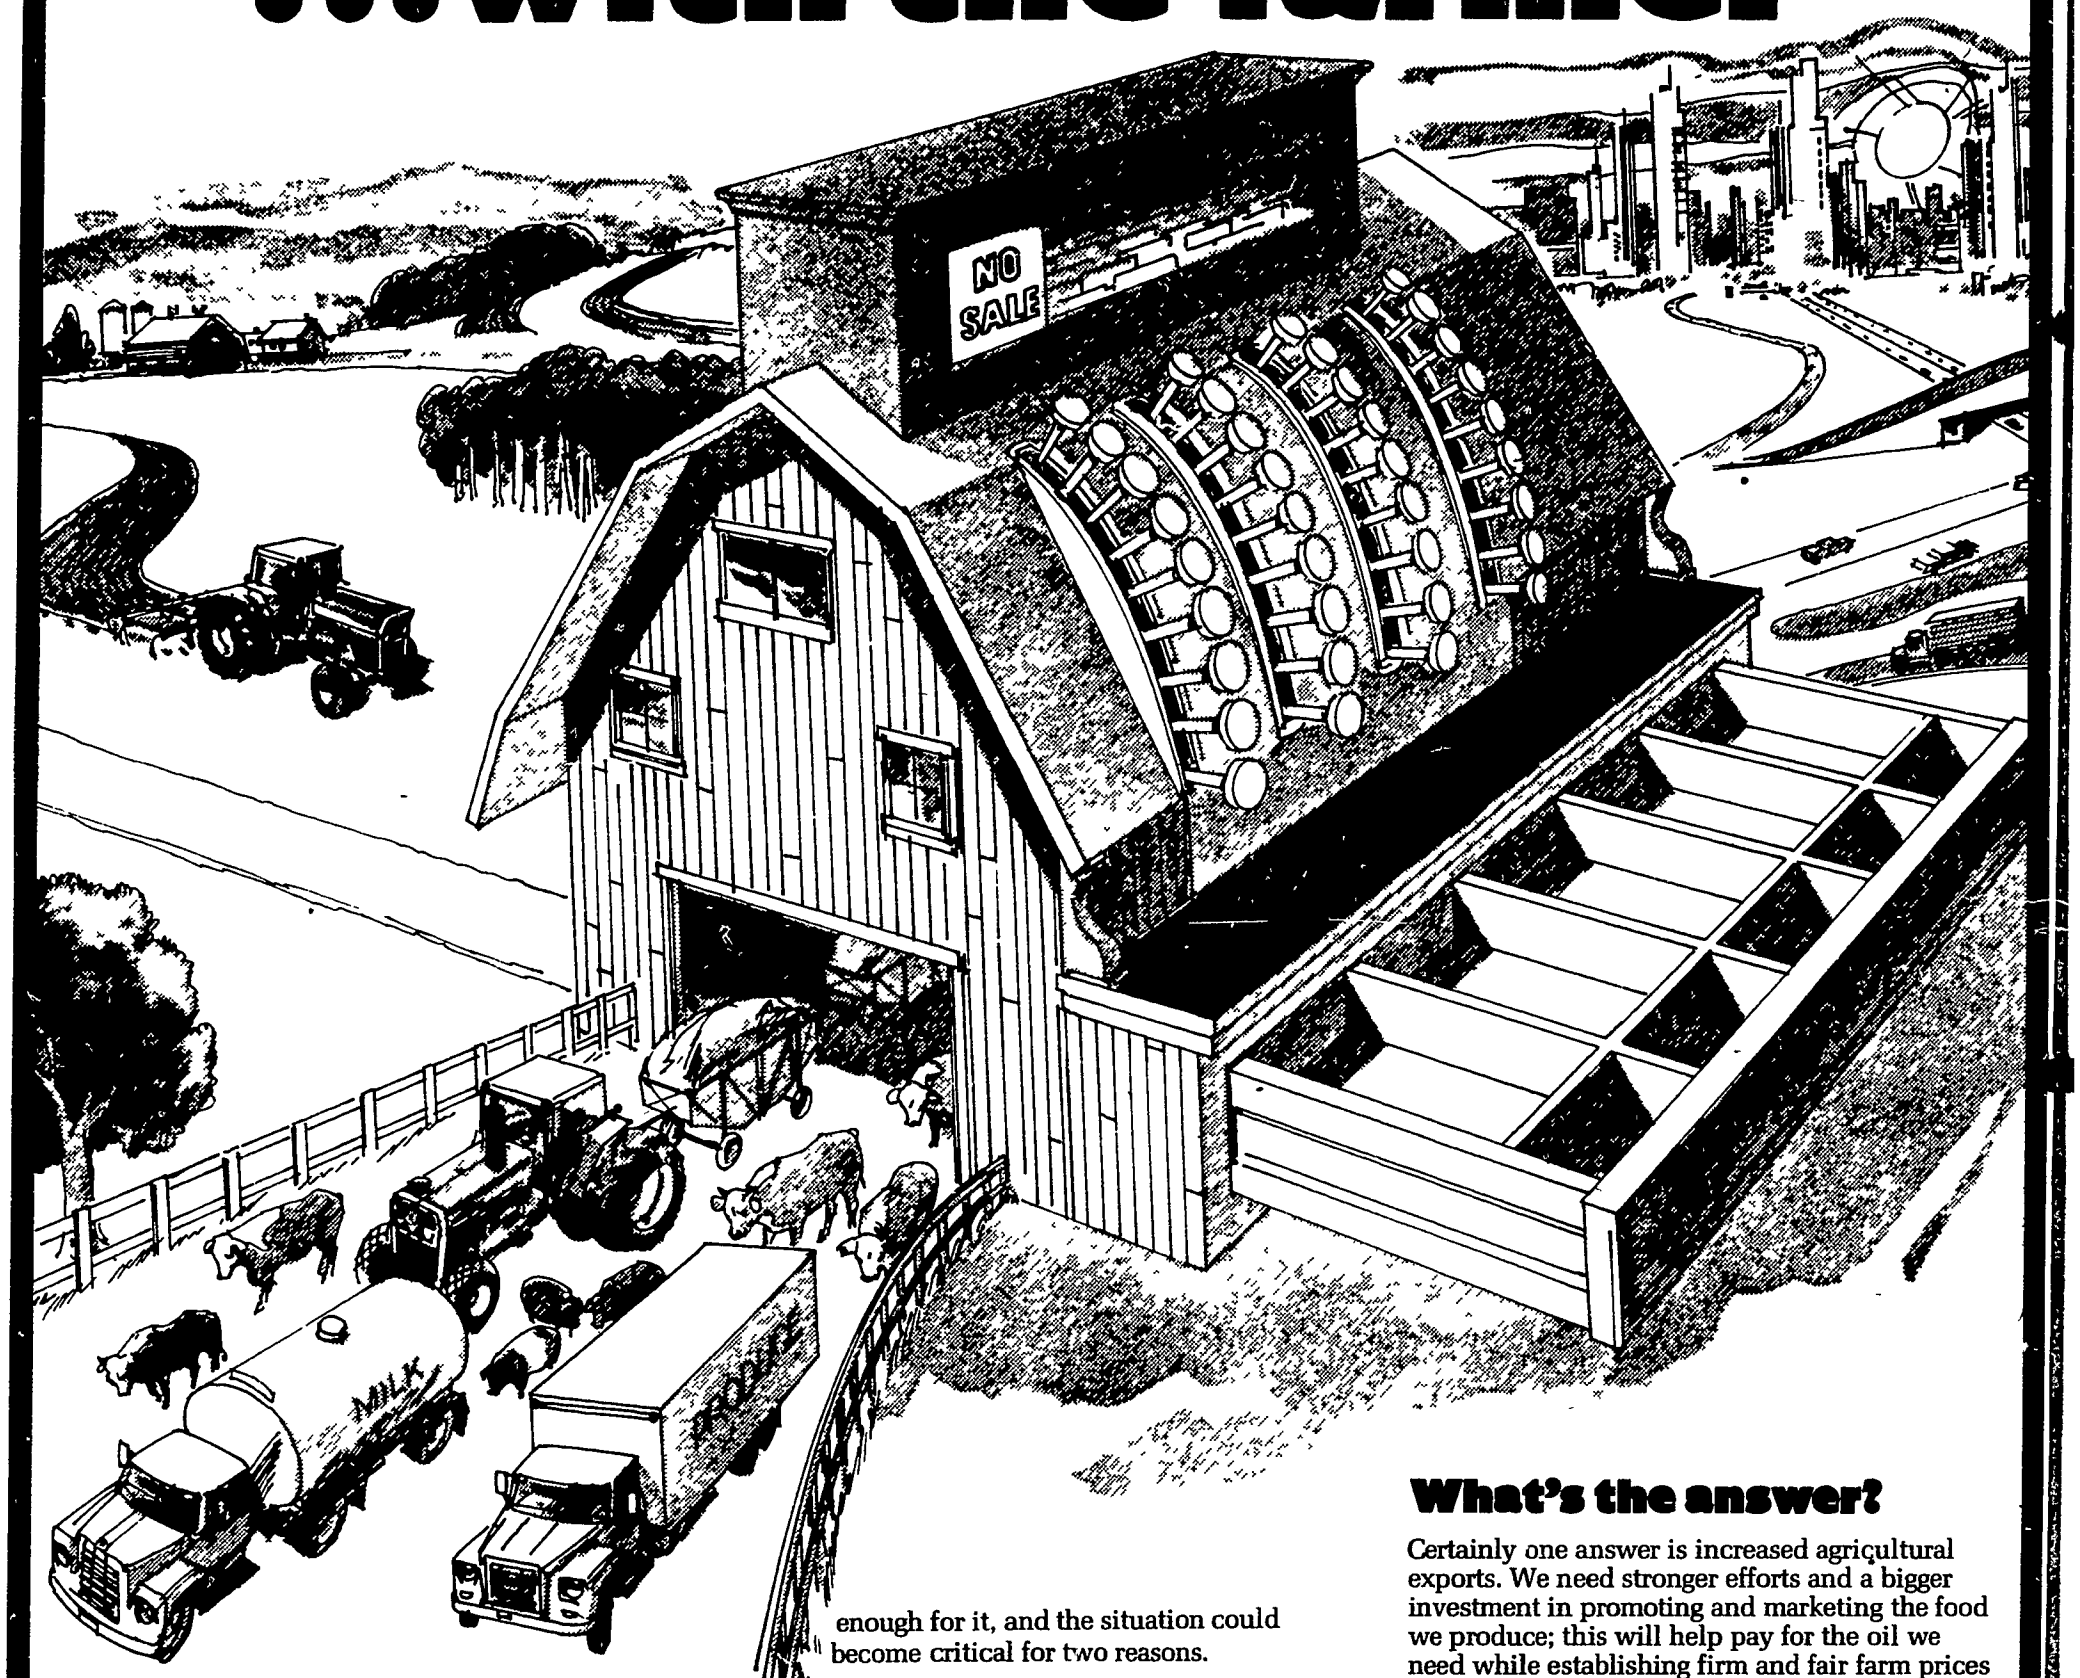
America has a balance of payments problem. ...with the farmer



Every year the American farmer puts a major investment, a considerable risk, and a large measure of hard work into producing a crop.

But when he goes to market with his products, what happens? He sometimes shows a "trade deficit," more often a trade-off, and all too seldom a reasonable profit.

Something is wrong.

The American public has a balance of payments problem with the people who put the food on our table. We simply aren't paying them enough for it, and the situation could become critical for two reasons.

First, reduced profits will cause some farmers to cut back production and others to go out of business. The predictable result will be skyrocketing grocery bills for everyone.

Second, and equally important, we need continued high farm production to provide enough food for export. Overseas trade deficits are rising, and sapping the strength of the American dollar. The more oil we have to import, the more food we ought to export. Even today, agriculture is one of the few categories on the plus side of our international balance sheet — to the tune of a $10 billion surplus in 1977.

What's the answer?

Certainly one answer is increased agricultural exports. We need stronger efforts and a bigger investment in promoting and marketing the food we produce; this will help pay for the oil we need while establishing firm and fair farm prices at the same time.

Then, with the expectation of a reasonable return, farmers will continue to invest the capital and labor necessary to maintain the high productivity so vital to our economy.

In the interest of better understanding about the American farmer and his impact on our lives and our economic future, as individuals and as a nation, this message is brought to you by Massey-Ferguson Inc., Des Moines, Iowa 50315.

Greenhouses to play role in food for future

By JOYCE BUPP
Staff correspondent

STATE COLLEGE — Greenhouses are expected to play an increasing role in the future as food becomes more and more a global concern.

But greenhouse operations are high energy users. Since energy shortages may go hand in hand with possible food shortages, horticulture researchers and agriculture engineers are working together to develop energy efficient, high production under-glass units.

Dollars add up fast when greenhouse heating costs are totaled. Between 80 cents to one dollar is the estimated cost of annually heating a square foot of under-glass growing space, or about $45,000 per acre. Heating costs are expected to continue to climb about 10 to 15 per cent each year. Such

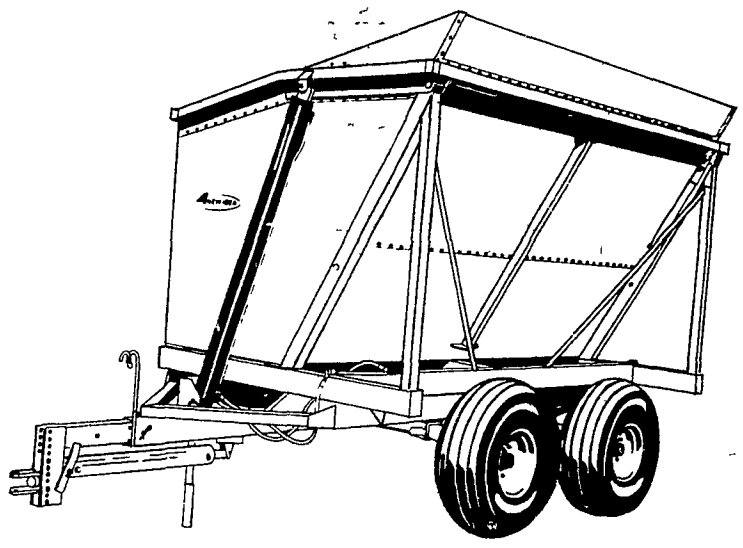
SAVE TIME AND MONEY MOVING CROPS



Whatever your tough hauling job may be, save time, labor and equipment costs with an Avco New Idea Hydaulic Dump Box.

Choose from two styles and three box sizes for rapid transfer and easy handling of material. New Idea offers three types of running gears: single, tandem or 4-wheel auto-steer. Ideal for seed corn, sweet corn, corn silage, haylage, shelled corn, small grains, sugar beets or dry chop materials. One all-purpose dump box will reduce your material transfer time and improve transport vehicle and driver efficiency.

YOU GET MORE HAY AND BETTER QUALITY HAY WITH THE MODEL 299 MOW/DITIONER

It does three jobs for you in a single pass — cuts a full 9 feet 3 inches, conditions and swaths or windrows — under just about any field condition.

The "Quick-Response" header flotation means less damage to guards and sickle on rough fields, and gives you more hay by maintaining a uniform stubble height.

Not only are you saving time, you're making higher quality hay with minimum damage to the valuable, nutrient-loaded leaves. The "Spiral Press" conditioning rolls run lug-on-lug to intermittently flatten stiff plant stems and is gently to tender leaves and short stems.

Maintenance is quick and simple, so you can spend more time in the field.

Put all of these things together, and you'll see why Mow/Ditioners are making sense to more and more farmers.

Rugged cutterbar gives you long life. The cutterbar is formed from one piece 3/8-inch steel and welded to the deck sheet to form a box section for maximum strength.

Adjustable windrow shields match drying and pickup width requirements. Convenient handles adjust either shield independently. A quick-adjust swath deflector slows and fluffs material for better air circulation and fast drying.

High-flotation tires distribute the weight evenly and because they are located up close to the machine center of gravity, they provide excellent balance and weight distribution to minimize sidedraft.

"Quick-Response" header flotation means uniform stubble height and minimum guard and sickle damage in each of six cutting positions. A unique pivot arrangement on the main frame, combined with the up-close position of the low profile, high flotation tires, quickly raises the cutterbar over obstacles. This design simply scissors the tongue and main assembly with the help of two adjustable springs.

Four-bar pickup reel lifts downed crop for a quick, clean cut, then sweeps it uniformly, butt first, into the conditioning rolls.

Wobble box knife drive gives fast cutting action for field travel — up to 8 mph.

Disc-type slip clutch provides complete drive line protection against shock and overloading.

Overrunning clutch protects both the gear box and the tractor from sudden deceleration.

Poultry industry reluctant in supporting coalition

ARLINGTON, Va. – In a letter to United Egg Producers' Executive Vice President Al Pope, Poultry and Egg Institute of America President Don Beaver has expressed the Institute's reluctance to support UEP's call for a "poultry industry coalition."

UEP made the suggestion last week that a "coalition of poultry organizations on the Washington scene is a must" and made the recommendation that a coalition organization should hold periodical meetings on crucial issues of mutual interest.

"If you will recall last January," Beaver wrote Pope, "there was a meeting of 'Associated Poultry and Egg Industries' ... this organization was set up to coordinate government relations and other industry problems. At their last January 1978 meeting in Atlanta, of which Hendrik Wentink was Chairman, the organization voted to disband because over the years, it had not achieved what it was set up for and it duplicated the work and effort of a similar organization which was more effective."

"Since 1972," Beaver continued, "PEIA, NBC, UEP, NTF, NBMA and AFMA have met monthly and more often when necessary as an organization called the 'Poultry Organizations of Washington' to coordinate the government relations activities of the poultry and egg industry..."

Beaver pointed out that PEIA is making every effort to achieve coordination with the industry on government relations activities and the UEP proposal would do exactly what it proposes to eliminate - duplication of efforts. "Your call for a poultry coalition sounds good in the press, but we could not support the effort to create a new organization that would dissipate the effectiveness of one already operating within the poultry and egg industry," Beaver said.

"Our industry is blessed with an overabundance of organizations - let's not create new ones, but make the ones we have more effective," Beaver concluded.

Greenhouses

monstrous fuel bills have become the key economic reason for growers across the state to experiment with cost-cutting heating methods.

Solar energy for greenhouse use is one long-term research project being examined by scientists at Penn State University. Solar collectors, both located in the greenhouses and externally, are being tried. Heat gathered on sunny days can possibly be stored either in water or rocks for cloudy days and nightime use.

Thermal blankets are another innovation under study at the university. Blankets are composed of plastic sheeting coated with aluminized mylar, a material sometimes also used in tobacco production. When light drops to 50 footcandles, a device automatically pulls the blanket over beds of roses in the research units. Data collected so far shows that about 50 per cent of the normal energy loss can be saved with the blankets.

Double layers of polyvinyl coverings with a layer of air inflated between them is a proven energy saver that is becoming popular. One drawback to this type of greenhouse construction is a reduction in the light that is available to the plants.

Some varieties of plants are normally grown with additional light at night to hasten growth and flowering. By lowering these lights nearer the plants, temperatures surrounding the growing benches can be raised.

Labor is another major expense in greenhouse production of food and ornamental crops. Growing plants directly in the shipping containers and mechanized systems to water plants are two ways that greenhouse labor expense can be controlled.

Greenhouses of the future, predict some scientists, may not look at all like the traditional structures in use today. By the turn of the century, they may be all-enclosed, totally mechanized and computerized and grow plants strictly under flourescent lighting. Even abandoned coal mines or limestone caves, with their fairly constant temperatures of 50 to 60 degrees, may someday be equipped with rows of growing lamps and turned into underground food production areas.

Beef pamphlet available

CHICAGO, Ill. – "Rising Beef Prices: A Closer Look" is the name of a new background report prepared by the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock and Meat Board.

The eight-page report is intended to answer consumer and news media questions about recent increases in the retail price of beef. It takes the reader from the range through the feedlot, packing plant and retail store, examining costs and profits along the way.

"This background report should convince people that rising beef prices are the result of supply and demand, not some producer or 'middleman' rip-off," said John L. Huston, secretary of the Beef Industry Council. "We have also tried to show that the natural operation of the free market works to the best advantage of all."

The report has been distributed to food and consumer editors, business and financial editors, retail food store consumer advisors, state beef councils and other industry-related groups.

Copies are available at 50 cents each or $20 per 100 from: Beef Industry Council, 444 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Fed. Order 2 to receive positive letters

HARRISBURG – State Agriculture Secretary Kent D. Shelhamer says that milk producers in Federal Order Two can expect to receive positive letters as a method for collecting funds to be used for dairy product promotions by the American Dairy Association and the Keystone Milk Marketing Council. The positive letter has been approved by Federal Order Two Market Administrator Thomas Wilson.

Shelhamer said that evidence shows dairymen are benefitting from the programs of the American Dairy Association and the Keystone Milk Marketing Council.

"Research conducted by Cornell University and Michigan State University shows that for every dollar invested in milk promotion in New York City, dairymen receive $2.50 in return."

"Sales for the last three measurable months," Shelhamer said, "were up one per cent in December, 1.4 per cent in January and 0.5 per cent in February." He noted that a majority of all milk from Federal Order Two goes into New York City.

The ag secretary explained that dairymen in the New York State portion of Federal Order Two have voted, by a majority of 81 per cent, to continue their referendum under which all farmers contribute. The ADA and the Keystone Milk Marketing Council are hoping that farmers receiving the positive letter will join with New York dairymen to expand promtoinal efforts.

The positive letter will be sent to producers with their May milk checks, according to Shelhamer. Contributions will be deducted beginning in June. Shelhamer said that support for his program from the 5600 Pennsylvania dairymen who ship to Order Two markets would help the ADA and the Keystone Milk Marketing Council conduct promotions which would positively influence milk sales in Federal Order Two.

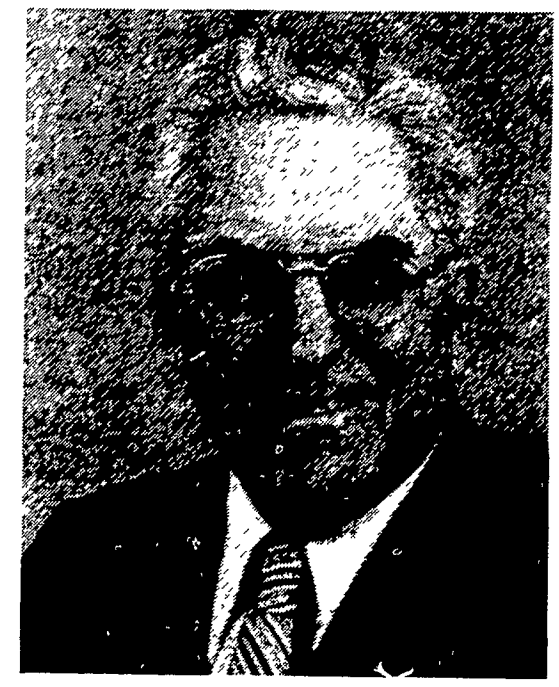
Andrew J. WATSON FARMERS CHOICE for GOVERNOR



Andrew Watson believes:

In the American competitive enterprise system.

That man's search for progess should be encouraged by maintenance of opportunity, not hindered by illusions of security.

That a person should be rewarded in accordance with his productive contribution to society.

That every man is entitled to own property, earn money honestly, save, invest and spend as he chooses.

That property rights cannot be taken away without infringing on rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

AMERICAN CANAL IN PANAMA: The Canal belongs to the American people. WATSON agrees with Gov. Ronald Reagan who says, "We bought it, we built it, we should keep it."

FOREIGN IMPORTS: American firms are being put out of business and American workers are out of work because of cheap imports produced by slave labor. Steel mills, clothing, radio, and television factories are closing because of unfair foreign imports. We need protection for American Industry and American labor.

PENNSYLVANIA'S HIGHWAYS: Once the greatest — now in shambles — yet TAXES go up-up-up. We need a new administration dedicated to construction and maintenance of the highest standards.

PROPERTY OWNERS are being over-run by paternalistic bureaucrats. Property rights are the very foundation of our Freedom. Owners must have control over their property and the right to vote in all bond issues.

GUNS: No registration of guns or ammunition.

LABOR: Only workers pay taxes. More pay for more work. Higher pay for higher efficiency. Stop taking tax dollars from producers to give to non-producers.

INDUSTRY: Immediate relief from unfair, unrealistic and costly environmental regulations. Immediate adjustment of business taxes and capital investment incentives. Unfair taxes stifle expansion, endanger jobs and forestall new industry.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT: Immediate enactment.

CRIME: Mandatory jail sentence for carrying a gun in commission of a felony. Lock up the criminals and stop harassing the police. Drug merchants and pushers should be treated like any other criminal. Reassess the parole system.

ABORTION: No tax money or support for killing the innocent

SCHOOLS: For neighborhood schools without busing and voluntary prayer and Bible reading The government has no right to tax one man to send another man's child to college.

FREEDOM: Every citizen has the right to seek employment and to choose an honest livelihood. The government has neither the Constitutional right nor obligation to guarantee a job or income in a free society.

We are just a few of the hundreds of people in Pennsylvania Agriculture who know Andy Watson's position, not just for a campaign but for many years. We don't need any more city lawyers to tell us how to farm — when to plow with a permit the bureaucrats issue — when and if we can spread manure on our fields. All the other candidates are city lawyers. Who do you think poured all the money into their slick advertising campaign? Andy Watson has walked our fields — has been in our barns, our homes — has counciled with us about problems common to all of us. Andy and his lovely wife Polly are from coal miner and farm parents. They grew up in the coal fields of Clarion County. Andy is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, an engineer trained in hydraulics, highway design and construction. He has practical training and experience with our creeks and waste water problems. He owns and operates 150 acres in Dauphin County. He is a successful businessman who knows farm machinery first hand. He is a man we can trust — a man of impeccable character, believes as we do. "THAT PEOPLE WHO WORK SHOULD LIVE BETTER THAN THOSE WHO WON'T". Many of us have spent a lifetime struggling to survive on the land we love only to be harrassed by bureaucrats who know nothing about our problems and could care less. Andrew Watson is the best qualified candidate in the Republican Primary — the only candidate who can win in November. He understands the problems, the ambitions, the dreams of the people — he is truly one of us. Andy Watson is first on the Republican ballot and first in the hearts of all who know him. We urge you to join us in voting for him May 16th.

Bergman's research paid off for celery industry

By JOYCE BUPP
Staff reporter

STATE COLLEGE – Does agriculture research really pay off?

For a group of specialist vegetable growers, one solution through research was the lifeline that literally kept their industry alive.

Some of the most delicious celery in the country is grown in southcentral Pennsylvania. But 20 years ago, when Dr. Ernest Bergman began conducting research at the Pennsylvania State University, the state's celery growers were suffering economic losses from a series of crop problems.

Dr. Bergman, a specialist in plant nutrition, took a close look at the accepted growing practices and suspected that normal crop treatments were actually adding to the celery problems.

Fertilization with poultry manure was causing plant burns and putting the stalks under stress, and there were no soil tests available for determining calcium or magnesium levels in fields.

But, balck heart, a disease where the stalk center deteriorates, was the most common cause of losses to the celery industry. Researchers first tackled the theory that black heart was caused by the tarnished plant bug. Studies done in Florida fields pointed toward calcium deficiencies as the culprit in the black heart problem.

Leaves of the plants were also distorted and traced to the common practive of spraying boron on the fields to prevent black heart. After additional studies, Dr. Bergman discovered that the plants were suffering from a boron toxicidity that had built up in some of the soils. That's still a problem he worries about even today, he admits.

The Penn State specialist set out to establish a better variety of celery that would be resistant to the disease problems. Tests were run using various levels of calcium and potassium additions, as well as experiments in hydroponic growing. In hydroponic testing, plant roots do not grow in soil, but are maintained in water with frequent bathing with nutrient solutions.

Through a series of minor disasters, only three of the original 60 study plants survived. In an attempt to salvage the remaining ones and help them bolt into seed heads, the tree surviving celery stalks were subjected to treatments.

The outcome of the cold treatment was a setting of seed by one plant, ultimately dubbed "Grandma Moses" by the research staff. Seed from the one triumphant plant was sown; seven years after the studies began, a new variety of celery, "Penn Crisp," was born.

Today, Penn Crisp seed is still grown at the University for the approximately 45 celery growers in Pennsylvania. Each year, 250 plants are brought to the College of Agriculture for cooling treatment and then placed in the greenhouses to go to seed. Seed head stalks are collected by hand and placed into sacks and shaken to remove the seeds. The seed crop is then cleaned, certified and made available to interested growers.

One half ounce of the celery seeds costs eight dollars and should provide plants for one acre of planting, at the rate of 25,000 stalks per acre. While seed investment in celery growing is relatively low, the crop requires a very high input of hand labor from the seed to the table.

A remaining problem for celery growers is soil nematodes, a pest which plant pathologists are presently studying. Dr. Bergman noted that the most recently developed nematicide has been banned by regulatory agencies; and the alternative, soil fumigation, costs a grower about $300 per acre.

For Pennsylvania's celery industry, agriculture research is a heart-warming success story. Due to the ongoing efforts of scientists like Dr. Ernest Bergman, agriculture continues to pump billions of dillars into the economy of America.

Temporary change in milk order

NEW YORK, N.Y. – A milk pooling requirement under the Middle Atlantic federal milk marketing order has been suspended from April through August, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said.

Herbert L. Forest, dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the action suspends the requirement that a milk distributing plant must sell at least 50 per cent of its milk for fluid-use before it's eligible to have all its milk pooled and priced under the order.

Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Inc., and Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers requested the suspension. The cooperatives told USDA that because of increased milk production that's not matched by sales of fluid-use milk, some plants may not be eligible to have their milk pooled during April through August.

The suspension, Forest said, will assure that producers who regularly supply the market will continue to have their milk included in the marketwide pool and share in the returns from the sale of fluid-use milk.

Notice that USDA was considering the suspension was published in the April 17 Federal Register inviting comments through April 24.

Copies of the suspension order are available from Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine, 300 N. Lee St., #320, Alexandria, Va. 22313; or from the Dairy Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

June Order 4 milk price $12.02

ALEXANDRIA, Va. – Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Jospeh D. Shine recently announced a Class I milk price of $12.02 per hundredweight for June 1978. Shine said that the price is up 15 cents from May and is 64 cents higher than the June 1977 prices. Order No. 4 prices are announced for milk testing 3.5 per cent butterfat, f.o.b. plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia, Pa. and also within 75 miles from the nearer of Washington, D.C. or Baltimore, Md. There is also a 6-cent direct-delivery differential applicable to producer milk received at plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia.

Mr. Shine announced a Class II milk price of $9.17 per hundredweight for April 1978 and a butterfat differential of 12.1 cents. The Class II price is up 11 cents from the previous month.

These class prices are based on the April 1978 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $9.24 per hundredweight adjusted to a 3.5 per cent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for April was $1.0520 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.6971 per pound f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

People came from all over Southeastern Pa. to buy the trees. Offered in the sale were: Blue Spruce, Douglas Fir, Norway Spruce, Scotch Pine, White Pine, White Dogwood, Red Maple, Red Oak, and White Birch seedlings.

Speaker at the banquet was Byron Horne, Lititz. He spoke of the obligation each person has as an American and stated that everyone needs to fit into their role in life.

Colo. facility to use animal wastes

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has approved a $14.2 million loan to the Lamar, Colo. Utility Board for construction of the largest animal waste bio-conversion facility in the United States to help meet the energy needs of 10,000 area residents.

Secretary Bergland called the methane generating facility, which will take 27 months to complete, "both exciting and innovative. The Department of Agriculture, through the Farmers Home Administration's business and industry loan program, is proud to participate in this venture which will demonstrate that it is possible to reduce this nation's dependence on oil, natural gas and other non-renuwable resources."

The bio-conversion plant will convert 350 tons of animal waste from feedlots in the Lamar area into a million cubic feet of methane gas per day. And it will also produce 130 tons of protein supplement from the residue that can be used as a livestock feed, reducing feeding costs by $12 to $18 per head, a substantial margin in the cattle feeding business.

The Four Corners Regional Commission provided nearly $400,000 to help develop plans for the Lamar system and the USDA added $25,000 to expedite the cattle feeding trials. The trials were to evaluate how much weight the feeder cattle would gain by using the protein residue from the bio-conversion process.

Lamar recognized several years ago that it could no longer depend on natural gas for its energy needs and began seeking an alternative. A coal-fired generating plant was the first obvious answer before the bio-conversion plant, which is less costly and uses a renewable resource, became a possiblity.

The bio-conversion plant will use the waste heat from the existing Lamar power plant and will recycle much of the water used in the process. After the water from the anaerobic digester (methane generator) is used for the production of the algae, which can be used as a soil conditioner as well as a feed supplement, it will be returned to the regular water system for normal use.

The facility will serve several purposes beyond efficient generation of a long-term supply of energy from a renewable resource and the production of an inexpensive feed supplement for cattle. The facility will provide an effective pollution control system for the area feedlots, for example.

An estimated $10 million in increased agriculture-related activity will result from the plant and about 70 new jobs will be created

Close mowing harmful to lawns

MEDIA – The height one mows may very well determine the life of the grass in his lawn. Mowing the Kentucky bluegrass-red fescue type lawn closer than 1½ inches gradually weakens and eventually kills the grass. The end result is a thinned-out lawn infested with a variety of weeds. Close cutting neither looks more attractive nor lessens the number of times a lawn must be mowed. Evenness of cut rather than closeness makes a lawn attractive. Close cutting does not permit the lawn to manufacture the food it needs for building strong deep root systems and a dense sod.

For the Kentucky bluegrass-red fescue type lawn, the mower should be set to cut the grass at a height of 1½ to 2¼ inches. This includes Merion Kentucky bluegrass. The 2¼ inch height is especially desirable during the summer months.

In contrast, certain types of lawn grasses are well adapted for close mowing. The bentgrasses and Zoysia should be cut at a height of ½ to 1 inch.

Mowing is necessary for a properly groomed lawn. One should be kind and considerate of the tolerance of the grass. It should be given a chance with a properly adjusted and sharp-bladed mower set at the correct height.

4-H officers elected

The new officers are. Doug Hershberger, president; Mary Lindecamp, vice president; Nancy Akers, secretary; Tom Herr, treasurer; Susan Hess, news reporter; Connie Ziegler, game leader, and Margie Overly, song leader.

Bar Cadaoas and Ken Opinaldo, who are visiting from the Philippines, gave club members and guests an illustration of 4-H demonstrations in their native clubs.

Cadaoas' topic was "Treating Garden Seeds with Insecticides". Both led the group in singing songs from their country.

Thornburgh pledges to preserve farmland

ANNVILLE -- Dick Thornburgh, Republican candidate for governor, has pledged to promote comprehensive land use planning and other measures aimed at preserving Pennsylvania farmlands.

"As Governor, I will work to insure the preservation of prime land by doing everything I can to help the farmer as businessman," said Thornburgh. "We have to find ways to ease the business burdens of rising taxes and farming costs and insufficient prices for farm products."

Thornburgh, 45, former US attorney for western Pennsylvania and assistant US attorney general, held a press conference at the dairy farm of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bomgardner to dramatize his concern for Pennsylvania's agricultural community.

Thronburgh said his proposals had grown out of his recent successful Farmers Town Meeting in Lancaster, his talks with individual farmers and farm organizations and recommendations by the Pennsylvania Farmers for Thornburgh Committee.

Thornburgh said that as governor he would work to:

*Improve markets and prices for Pennsylvania farm products.

*Take practical steps to preserve agricultural land and family farms, including changes in property and inheritance taxes.

*Provide research needed for improving production and marketing of farm products, including increased veterinary and product research.

*Support the Milk Marketing Board and either increased bonding or the creation of a milk security fund to assure that farmers are paid for their milk.

*Improve and maintain transportation facilities crucial to farming areas - especially rural roads, bridges, and highways.

*Appoint a secretary of agriculture and a staff of a Department of Agriculture that will represent and serve as an advocate for the needs of farmers.

Thornburgh said that he will continue as governor the open and informal town meetings with Pennsylvania's farmers that he began during the campaign.

Thornburgh again stressed his opposition to any new gun control laws. "I believe in stiff sentences for criminals who use firearms in committing their crimes," he said. "But I see no need for any new gun control laws to be passed."

Freezer can save kitchen time

MEDIA -- Even homemakers with fulltime jobs outside the home can serve their families nutritious food without spending hours in the kitchen every day. Here are some shortcuts one may not have tried, from experts at Penn State.

One should make the most of her freezer as a time saver, preparing enough food for several meals at one time. It should be cooled quickly and frozen in meal-size packs. A person may want to set aside a morning or an evening for this.

For example, one can prepare a meat or poultry roast. Then she can remove cooked meat from bones and package for freezing. Each package should be labeled for intended use - large firm pieces for slicing, smaller pieces for sandwiches, bits for casseroles and soups; one can make up her favorite meat and tomato sauce in quantity. It can be frozen for use later in macaroni and spahetti dishes, for lasagna, Spanish rice or chili. Most combinations main dishes freeze well. Experimenting can be done by freezing small amounts of one's favorite recipes - meat and fish loaves, stews and chowders, meat, poultry and fish pies, stuffed peppers.

Or one can make up batches of lunch box sandwiches and freeze them. Almost any meat, poultry, fish or cheese sandwich freezes well but one should avoid very moist fillings that soak into bread. Freezing toughens egg white and makes raw tomatoes and greens go limp. But most baked foods freeze well. One can also freeze uncooked fruit pies and cookie dough.

Jobs available

LANCASTER – Full and part-time positions continue to be available in Lancaster City and County through the Office of Aging Senior Employment Program.

Variety of hobbies featured at craft show

By KENDACE BORRY

LANCASTER -- Over eighty craftsmen gathered their work together to converge on Park City Mall, Lancaster, last weekend to display, demonstrate, and sell their handiwork. Shoppers had the opportunity to see weaving, pottery, woodworking, jewelry making, macrame, fraktur, theorem painting, and woodcarving, to name a few of the wide variety of crafts on view.

All the craftsmen exhibiting were members of the Pa. Guild of Craftsmen. The show was the largest craft show in the northeast during 1978 in which the exhibitors were required to demonstrate their work.

One exhibitor on hand at the show was Mrs. Roy M. Eshleman, Lancaster, a juried member of the Pa. Guild of Craftsmen. She is a quilting teacher, designer of quilts, lecturer, and consultant. Her quilting work as been recognized for her fine stitching, with her quilting stitch averaging 14 to 17 stitches per inch.

Mrs. Eshleman has been quilting for ten years. She started by taking some courses in quilting and became active in the work. She stated that her grandmother was a quilter, but the talent seemed to have skipped by her mother. But she, herself, picked it up and has been working with the skill ever since.

She does a lot of teaching of the art of quilting and noted she especially likes working with retired or handicapped students. She covers the many different aspects of quilting, including the use of the portable frame.

Nearby the quilting exhibit, Larry McComsey, from Denver, could be seen working on his leathercraft. The industrial arts teacher from Cocalico School started making leather wristbands in his spare time four years ago and hasn't stopped yet. Now he is into making all sorts of different leather items, including a variety of jewelry and pocketbooks.

He simply does it because he likes to do it. He thinks his work in unique because he has a different way of finishing his leather, the toning is special. Now his work appears at different craft shows and in shops. He thinks the most popular item is still the braided wristband and related that he has sold thousands and thousands of them.

At another spot in the Mall, several miniature doll houses could be viewed. The work of Tony Iacono and his brother, Lancaster, the two have been located in the area for two years making miniatures.

Tony, who explained that he was a trained artist, and did most of the art work for the business, noted that his brother had studied cabinet making and started the doll house business, and then asked him to join. The two formed Sir Thomas Thumb and have been making miniatures of all kinds ever since.

He estimated that they have made about 75 to 100 doll houses, with the cost of the finished project ranging anywhere from $50 to $600.

Just about everything can be miniaturized, according to Iacono. There are real stained glass windows, feather dusters, rugs, coverlets, pillows, quilts, cornhusk dolls, and rustic brooms made from Lancaster County broom straw. "There is even a miniature mouse trap, about one half inch long," he related.

Some people bring in ideas to have their own house done in miniature. According to Iacono, there is a doctor in Lancaster County right now who is having a house built, and is saving all the

Conservationist defines soil stewardship

By JOANNE SPAHR

EPHRATA – When Aaron Z. Stauffer shows you his cropland terraced fields, his face lights up. Then, in an animated voice he describes how beautifully his system works, allowing the water to penetrate effectively, saving the land from erosion and gutters. And, before you know it, you're a believer.

According to Stauffer, that's soil stewardship – a reverent love of the land and a desire to treat it with respect so that you can leave it a little better off than you found it.

Stauffer's sentiments typify nearly all conservationists' beliefs and elaborate on the concept of Soil Stewardship Week, an annual nationwide observance which emphasizes man's responsibility to protect and conserve oil, water, and other natural resources. Soil Stewarship Week was celebrated last week.

"Nearly three thousand conservation districts across the United States held Soil Stewardship Week observances," remarked Stauffer, who is chairman of the Lancaster County Conservation District's Board of Directors, "and that adds to the religious aspects of the week. The Creator has assigned us to be good stewards of the soil."

Along with being a good steward of the soil, Stauffer has taken his responsibilities as a conservationist several steps further. He has been on the board of directors of the Lancaster County Conservation District for 15 years, and for the past seven has chaired the committee. Along with that responsibility, he is a member of the Agricultural Advisory Committee to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources as a representative from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources as a representative from the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc. He is also on the Land Use Advisory Committee to the Lancaster County Planning Commission and has served on the legislative committee for the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc. A further responsibility includes serving on the Northeast Area committee to the National Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

All these duties are in addition to his role as a farmer on his 68 acre property near Ephrata which he runs in partnership with his son, and his role as proprietor of the Cloister Restaurant, Inc., in Ephrata.

Why does he do it?

"It's hard to know why I'm a conservationist," he remarked in his quiet, gentlemanly manner. "But,

Keystone Expo Center adds Specter to list of supporters

YORK – Arlen Specter, May 16 gubernatorial primary candidate, has made a commitment in favor of construction of a new Keystone Exposition Center.

Specter is the fifth contender who has come out flatly in support of this project to encourage tourism and stimulate the sluggish economy of the Commonwealth. Hitherto Henry G. Hager, Robert Butera, and Richard L. Thornburgh, Republican candidates with Specter, and Lieutenant Governor Ernest P. Kline have endorsed the project. The contender with Kline for the Democratic nomination, Robert P. Casey, while conceding the importance of this new facility for the state, has declared the project unfeasible fiscally at least in the near term. Another Democratic contender, Peter Flaherty, has not declared his views.

The candidates gave their views to Dr. Norman F. Reber, editor emeritus of Pennsylvania Farmer magazine and chairman of the Keystone Exposition Center Committee, in response to a letter from the chairman.

This is what Specter had to say: "I support the construction of a new Keystone Exposition Center as long as it can be shown to be a self-supporting project. A step-by-step approach will allow us to continue to use portions of the old Farm Show Building while construction proceeds on the new Keystone Exposition Center."

The underlying theme expressed by the candidates in their favorable responses is that the Center be self-supporting and a positive influence on the economy. In his letter, Chairman Reber cited updated estimates based on a professional state-authorized study done about 10 years ago. It revealed a new center would generate a cash flow of an annual $32,000,000, or a yearly $13,000,000 more than was actually generated by the old center, known as the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg, at the time the study was made. Building past and future inflation factors into the latter figure, Dr. Reber estimates the net increase in cash flow from the new center over the present complex could readily exceed an annual $25,000,000. Since the study indicated that 80 per cent of the total cash flow was the result of out-of-state tourism, this would mean an annual $20,000,000 stimulant to the sluggish economy of the Commonwealth and bring into its treasury stepped-up dales and income tax revenue in much greater amounts than would be required for debt service on phased development of a new center, Reber said.

In contrast to this bright outlook from a new center, Reber cites the gloomy outlook of the old center, the mountainous maintenance costs on deteriorating and flood-ravaged buildings with shrunken exhibit space due to walls built to meet fire safety regulations. The proposed new supplementary building will only make up for the lost space and do nothing to satisfy the long waiting list of exhibitors and it will also be located in the flood plain, Reber observed. Meanwhile other states are offering attractive new facilities which will bring business to other states, Reber said.

The Keystone Exposition Center Committee is a spearhead action group of 18 state organizations pushing to put Pennsylvania into the forefront again through tourism as the exhibit center of the Northeast, a position it has lost from ten years of delay, deterioration and destruction.

Most hearing losses develop gradually, according to the Beltone Crusade for Hearing Conservation. As a result many hearing impaired persons do not realize their problem until the loss has become serious and even handicapping.

as a little boy I remember seeing the hurt on my father's face as we surveyed the damage on the farm after a storm. It hurt him to see what a storm could do, and I felt as though I wanted to leave a part of this world a little better than I found it."

The motivating force behind his conservation activities, he says, is the dedication of other members on the conservation district's board of directors. The dedication of Amos Funk, Millersville, a leading conservationist in Lancaster County, "has a tendency to "rub off," he says.

Stauffer believes Soil Stewardship Week helped to make more individuals aware of the need to respect the soil. Traditionally, churches and local citizens groups participate as they did this year.

Program launched in Del. to grow 200 bu. corn

NEWARK – Delaware farmers who irrigate ought to be able to grow 200 bushels of corn an acre. So far none have managed to do so, though a few have come mighty close to this goal. But if Extension specialists at the University of Delaware are right in their predictions, farmers who grow corn under irrigation will be bringing in some bonanza yields over the next couple of years.

With 200-bushel-an-acre harvests in mind, the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service has launched its "First State Irrigation Program" – a program designed to help corn farmers get the most out of present production technology.

"Most grain farmers have had limited experience with irrigation," says Extension agronomist Dr. William H. Mitchell, in explaining the need for the program. "It represents a new type of farming with greatly increased yields and higher profit potentials. With water no longer the yield-limiting factor, there can be less fluctuations in crop yields and more stability in the farming operation. We think that by placing more attention on refinement of the total production system, farmers will be able to get off the yield plateau they've been on in recent years.

"More fertilizer, better hybrids, improved weed control, and tillage practices have carried dry land yields upward about as far as they can go," adds Mitchell. "But if we can match the best of these practices with a properly managed irrigation system, there's no telling where we can go."

The First State Irrigation Program is designed to combine farmer know-how with expertise from supporting agricultural industries and Extension specialists and bring all this to bear on the problem of boosting corn yields.

There are three key features of the program: (1) informal discussions with farmers, (2) careful monitoring of production practices over the growing season, and (3) collection of yield data at harvesttime.

The Extension team first meets with individual farmers in "kitchen-table" discussions to review irrigation and crop production practices and to determine which are best suited for each farm. Then, during the growing season, each irrigation unit will be closely monitored for water use, crop nutrition, tillage, and weed control. At this time certain diagnostic tests such as leaf tissue analysis will be performed. This will make it possible to detect micro-nutrient deficiencies in time to correct them. Production details will be carefully recorded.

After yield data has been collected at the end of the season, a "Governor's Trophy" will be presented to the top corn grower in the program. Top yield will be determined by sampling at six locations, chosen at random, in a one-acre block selected by the grower.

Participants pay an entry fee of $50 for each irrigation unit entered. This fee will be used to (1) purchase three rain gauges for each entrant; (2) analyze soil samples from top and subsoil; (3) analyze corn tissue samples; (4) process production data; and (5) obtain aerial photographs using color and infrared film. If possible, data will be computerized. The aerial photographs will help to pinpoint problems of water application, disease, and fertility.

It is hoped that industry sponsors will pick up the tab for farmer entry fees. It is also hoped that industry representatives will become directly involved in this race to break the 200-bushel yield barrier on Delaware farms– by visiting individual growers and offering their own advice as to how to improve production.

Mitchell says farmers are enthusiastic about the possibilities of growing 200-bushel-an-acre corn. They're testing out a number of good solid practices to see which combinations will work best for them. More are expected to join as the program becomes better known.

Delaware corn farmers who are interested in entering the First State Irrigation Program should contact their county Extension office in Newark, Dover, or Georgetown.

Nutrition information not always correct

MEDIA – People are becoming more and more interested in nutrition. Many reallly want to learn more about how their diet affects their health, how they control their weight, how to avoid junk foods and how to feed their families well. With this increased interest has come all sorts of information on nutrition – paperback books, newspaper articles, TV shows, advertising. Unfortunately, much nutrition information available today is not accurate. It is written by people with little or no training in nutrition. They may just want to make money or have an ax to grind. Much of this kind of nutrition information is incorrect and may cause problems for people who try to follow the advice given.

How can one tell good, sound nutrition information from information likely to be incorrect? Greta C. Vairo, Extension home economist with Penn State offers some guidelines to follow.

Nutrition information is likely to be incorrect if it appeals to emotions – for example, if it scares one into thinking he must eat a certain food or he'll get sick. One should avoid information that recommends self-diagnosis – treating an illness without seeing a physician. Inaccurate nutrition information may also make fantastic "miracle claims," for a food-saying vitamin E will cure cancer, for example. One should watch out for testimonials backing up claims like this. Good reliable nutrition information will document research studies to support claims made. Beware if the information one reads or hears recommends taking large doses of vitamins or other nutrients or recommends eliminating a food or food group from the diet. Many fad diets suggest not eating carbohydrates – a diet that could harm one's health. A person should find out who is presenting the information. Since anyone can call themselves a nutritionist, one shouldn't assume that the individual has a degree in the field. Even a Ph.D. after an author's name may not mean anything. That Ph.D. could be in English. With over 600 paperbacks on nutrition on the market, and numerous other articles and pieces of information in the media, it's difficult to distinguish what's reliable and what's not. Next time a person has a question on something he's read or heard, he can use the suggestions given to help decide if the information is good or bad.

Book available on Delaware ag

TOWNSEND, Del. – Three Centuries of Delaware Agriculture", published by the Delaware State Grange and the Delaware Bicentennial Commission is now available to the public. First released at a state-wide Grange dinner, the book takes various areas of agriculture from the first Dutch and Swedish settlements to today's modern technology. The text is illustrated with old prints and photographs, plus pencil sketches by Grange artist Sandy E. Mathewson, Lake Ariel, Pa.

Main author of the book is Joanne O. Passmore, Townsend, who also wrote "History of the Delaware State Grange and of the State's Agriculture, 1874-1975", with the help of many Grange researchers. Other contributors to this new book are Charles Maske, Dover, and Daniel E. Harris, Newark.

Two years in the making, the book is written for general audiences as well as those interested in agriculture. It is a 112-page paperback, 8½" x 11". Del. farmers shifting to soybeans

NEWARK – Delaware farmers are following a national trend shifting corn acreage into soybean production. Government figures indicate they will increase soybean acreage while decreasing corn acreage.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture survey shows Delaware farmers intend to increase soybean acreage 15 per cent over last year. That would put the total at about 230,000 acres.

Delaware corn and soybean planting intentions closely follow the national picture as projected in U.S. Department of Agriculture findings. Nationally, farmers say they intend to plant a record 63.7 million acres of soybeans – that's eight per cent more than last year – and they intend to plant 80.2 million acres of corn, three per cent less than last year.

This shift in production was anticipated by most market analysts, according to Carl German, crops marketing specialist with the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service. He attributes the shift to comparative prices, and to the U.S. grain stocks of corn compared to soybeans.

Recently, soybean prices have been holding at over two-and-a-half times the price of corn. This same price relationship is now being seen for fall delivery of the two crops.

Corn stocks in all positions in the U.S. as of April 1 were 17 per cent higher than last year. Total corn stocks were placed at 3.84 billion bushels, a record high. On-farm corn stocks, totalling almost two-and-a-half billion bushels nationwide, are the highest they have been since 1972. Off-farm corn stocks, at 1.36 billion bushels, are the highest the nation has seen since 1961. Total feed grain stocks are 20 per cent higher than last year. Soybeans in all positions totalled 843 million bushels on April 1.

German points out that planting intentions could change significantly by the end of the planting season. A cool, wet Spring might lead farmers to plant the intended soybean acreage while cutting back even more than anticipated on corn. Furthermore, the economist points out, the new farm program, which currently has a diversion program, may not be reflected fully in the April figures. Farmers have until May 15 to decide whether to participate in the set aside program.

Delaware farmers will base their final planting decision upon grain prices for Fall and Winter delivery compared to their estimated production costs. They will also be weighing participation alternatives in the farm program, such as set aside acreage requirements, diversion payment eligibility, loan rates, and target prices. Equally important, of course, is the weather.

Why leading tomato growers use Bravo fungicide full-season.

Jim Kohl, Jr., Manager, Furman Farms, Inc. Northumberland, Pennsylvania.
Last year, Furman Farms was the Pennsylvania State Tomato Yield Champion for machine-harvested tomatoes. Manager Jim Kohl reports, "With whole-pack tomatoes, anthracnose and early blight will affect your grade tremendously. We have been on a full-season Bravo program since 1974. Last year we won the state yield title and had the highest grades we've had with machine harvest. I attribute a lot of that to our Bravo program. We start our Bravo program in June... then we make 6 to 8 sprays during the season."

Joseph Nicolosi, The Sarah Nicolosi & Sons Farm, Swedesboro, New Jersey.
"We grow 100 acres of process tomatoes, all machine-harvested, and we've been on a full-season Bravo program for about three years," says Mr. Joseph Nicolosi. "With our Bravo program, we definitely get better yields. And we control anthracnose better, close to 100% since we've gone to Bravo. Our grades are excellent. 95 to 100 percent saleable tomatoes."

Farm line phone-in set for May 24

NEW PARK – Gail McPherson, New Park area National Director for the Agriculture Council of America announced that ACA will conduct a "Farm Line" phone-in program to gather information on the topic – "Agriculture today: what should the American people know about it?" Farmers and local farm-related businessmen are urged to voice their opinions by calling ACA's toll-free number, 800-368-8050 on May 24 between noon and 4 p.m. E.D.T. A total of 12 lines will be available to callers anywhere in the continental U.S.

The Representative Tom Foley, Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Senator Carl Curtis, Ray Fitzgerald, Administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and Lynn Daft of President Carter's Domestic Policy Staff will head up the panel of experts on the farm economy that will answer the phones and speak with callers. They will be joined by other Members of Congress who deal directly with farm and food issues, and several top officials from USDA.

Information gathered over the Farm Line will be used in a new comprehensive effort ACA is planning, to communicate the facts about the current economic situation in agriculture.

"ACA is planning an agriculture visibility program – a comprehensive, factual report to the nation – to provide any concerned individual, company or organization with interesting creative material so they can tell their own story," commented ACA Chairman John Barringer, a cotton and beef producer from Memphis, Tennessee. "We hope farmers and businessmen from all over the country will call the Farm Line to voice their opinions on what facts need to be told to the non-farm public."

Each caller will be asked to respond to a special questionnaire designed to interpret opinion on the subject being addressed. Results of this survey will be studied closely by ACA in planning the visibility program.

"There's been a steadily increasing demand for material from people wanting to serve as spokesmen for agriculture in their own communities," added Barringer. "Our goal is to respond to this challenge in a meaningful and direct way that can have real impact."

Also answering the Farm Line phones and helping to interpret data will be members of the ACA Media Council. This group is made up of some 100 of the nation's leading farm broadcasters and editors who advise ACA on program content and effectiveness. The morning after the Farm Line, members of the Media Council will discuss results of the phone-in with several of the program's key panelists.

ACA operates the Farm Line program on a periodic basis to provide a forum for discussion to let people at the local level discuss major issues with national leaders in Washington. As a non-political and non-lobbying organization ACA does not advocate any particular position or view; the opinions expressed via the Farm Line are strictly those of the participants. Phone-in programs conducted in 1977 addressed the subjects of: Citizen Guidelines for USDA, status of the farm economy, and energy conservation.

About 500 calls are expected to be actually completed during the four-hour session. Anyone who is unable to complete their call on May 24th between noon and 4 P.M. E.D.T. is urged to put their comments in writing and mail them to: ACA, P.O. Box 23421, Washington, D.C. 20024. All written comments will also be reviewed as a part of the planning process for the visibility project.

The Agriculture Council of America, formed in 1973, is made up of individual farmers and ranchers nationwide, farm and commodity groups, and companies that supply the farmers. Its purpose is to promote better understanding of American agriculture.

blueprints so that an exact miniature can be built for his daughter.

Besides the doll houses, there are miniature general stores and fruit stands. And for those ambitious people who want to try and make their own miniature house, there is a kit that will start them off and allow them to create their own work of art.

Iacono related that interest in miniatures is growing in the Lancaster Farming area. He thought that a lot of people seemed to be fascinated by the art. Nationwide miniature collecting is the second most popular hobby there is now, with stamps being first, and coins now ranked third.

The skill of macrame was demonstrated by Caryn Griffiths, Lancaster, at another spot in the mall. The lady has been working with macrame for a year and told how she learned the craft.

"I was working part-time at a craft shop," she explained. "While there I learned to macrame, and I liked it so much I just went on from there." She added that the craft is fun because it's a fast art and reasonably inexpensive. Materials are also easy to obtain.

Her favorites to make are the plant hangers, and they're the most popular item she sells too. Second most popular would probably be the small macrame necklaces.

She considers her macrame just a hobby and she comes to the craft shows at the Park City Mall. She also teaches classes in the craft and added that now almost everybody does macrame. She thinks its popularity is increasing all the time.

Sitting at his workbench nearby, Wayne Wallis carved away, working on making a butter print out of wood. When asked how he got the idea of making the reproductions of colonial time item, he smiled.

"I used to make weather vanes," he answered. "Then my daughter and a friend of hers, who are both hep on folk art, asked if I would try to make a folk art butter print big enough to hang on the wall. So I made them a couple."

"I thought that would be the end of it, but I started getting orders. Now they're being sold in county gift shops, and in such places as Oklahoma, Indiana, and Virginia. I guess I've made thousands."

His workroom is in the basement of his home. There he will start with boards, and make the round forms, which are scarred with a knife. Then he hand carves the designs into the wood.

All the designs he uses are traditional designs which he copies from museum examples and books. The designs, he explained, are part of the Pa. Dutch heritage. They were introduced by the Rhinelanders who came to this country at the invitation of William Penn in the early 1700s.

The Pennsylvania Guild of Craftsmen will hold their 31st craft market and exhibit on August 4 through 6 at the Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster. The public is invited to attend and see at close hand the various crafts on display.

Caryn Griffiths's nimble fingers add the knots that will turn the string into a necklace to be worn.

Mrs. Roy M. Eshleman quilts away working on the tiny stitching which adds to the craftsmanship of the sewing. Behind her, a finished quilt on display can be seen.

Nitrite-free meats proposed

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Bacon, ham, frankfurters, corned beef, and similar products could be manufactured with little or no nitrites or nitrates and still be labeled with their traditional names under a U.S. Department of Agriculture proposal announced recently.

Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant secretary for food and consumer services, said these products would have to be labeled to highlight the fact that they are nitrite-free or not fully preserved, and include a warning that refrigeration is nessary at all times. Under current regulations, such products must be cured with nitrites or nitrates to be labeled with their traditional names.

"Our Food Safety and Quality Service is proposing to make this change in response to consumer requests for nitrite-free products," Ms. Foreman said. She added that several meat processors have also requested permission to market nitrite-free products under the traditional names such as bacon and frankfurters.

Ms. Foreman stressed, however, the concern of meat inspection officials that these products, prepared with little or no nitrite, might be subject to botulism unless carefully handled.

"Therefore, she said, "The proposal calls for labeling that emphasizes the need for refrigeration. If the proposal is adopted, we will expect the meat packing industry to cooperate with USDA in an intensive effort to inform consumers on how to handle these products to avoid any threat of food poisoning."

Under the proposal, the nitrite-free products, unless preserved by thermal processing, fermentation of pickling, drying or salting would have to be labeled with the warning, "No Nitrate Or Nitrite Added–Not Preserved, Must Be Refrigerated Below 40°F. At All Times."

Meat products prepared with less than the traditional amounts of nitrite and/or nitrate and not preserved by other processes would have to be labeled, "Not Fully Preserved, Must Be Refrigerated Below 40°F. At All Times."

Nitrite-free or reduced–nitrite products would have to be prepared with flavorings and other ingredients that would give them a flavor and consistency similar to traditional meat products of the same name, currently being cured with nitrite and/or nitrate.

The proposal also contains a provision to ban the use of nitrites and nitrates in baby, junior, and toddler meat foods.

Comments on the proposal are invited and may be submitted, in duplicate, to the Hearing Clerk, U.S. Department of Agriculture, room 1077-S, Washington, D.C. 20250. Comments must be received by June 27.

The proposal is scheduled for publication in the April 28 Federal Register. Copies may be obtained from the FSQS Information Division, USDA, room 1154-S, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Packer violates P&S

PATTERSON, N.J. -- Victory Beef Co., Corp., Paterson, N.J., has been ordered to stop violating the payment and trust account requirements of the Packers and Stockyards (P&S) Act.

The meat packing firm is not operating at this time. However, it formerly purchased livestock throughout eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey and meat in New Jersey.

The firm consented on issuance of the order and waived oral hearing. It neither admitted nor denied charges in the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) administrative complaint filed March 31.

The complaint charged that the firm failed to pay, when due, the full price for more than $131,000 worth of livestock and $62,000 worth of meat; and used funds that should have been held in trust. USDA officials said the firm has since made partial payment on its livestock indebtedness.

The cease and desist order, like a permanent injunction, was issued to insure Victory Beef's future compliance with the P&S Act.

Federal agencies agree to provide farmers with cost-sharing program for water pollution

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Many farmers will be able to get federal cost-sharing assistance to help solve water pollution problems caused by agricultural activities. The Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Agriculture have reached agreement on how to set up the new Rural Clean Water Program.

This agreement establishes a framework for the program, which is authorized by the 1977 Clean Water Act.

"This agreement on the essential elements of the Rural Clean Water Program shows that environmental and agricultural interests are compatible," said EPA Assistant Administrator Thomas Jorling. "The program is designed to maintain the agricultural productivity of the nation and, at the same time, to improve the quality of its waters."

The agreement paves the way for detailed regulations on the program to be proposed by USDA for public comment next month. Congress has authorized $200 million in fiscal year 1979 and $400 million in FY 1980 for cost-sharing funds under this program. It authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to enter into long-term contracts (between five and 10 years) with rural landowners and operators for the purpose of installing and maintaining best management practices to control agricultural "non-point" source pollution and to improve water quality.

Contamination of waterways by pesticides, fertilizers, animal wastes and sediment resulting from agricultural operations is a serious water pollution problem that must be addressed under the Act. These problems can be effectively solved using better soil and water management practices. Such measures as contour plowing, using vegetation to control erosion, pesticide and fertilizer management programs and other practices, as specified in approved State and local water quality management plans prepared under Section 208 of the Act, are eligible.

Some farmers will be required to take clean-up action under approved 208 plans. The cost-sharing program is intended to make it easier on the pocketbooks of farmers required to take clean-up action, but participation in the cost-sharing program is voluntary. Specific information on what clean-up requirements, if any, apply to a particular area can be obtained from EPA's Regional Offices. However, most 208 plans are still in preparation.

Jorling said that "water pollution problems related to farming and forestry production result mainly from high sediment levels in waterways due to soil erosion, the runoff of pesticides and fertilizers, and the contamination of waterways by animals wastes. Solving these problems is clearly desirable in terms of both agricultural productivity and environmental quality."

The agreement recognizes the strong contributions of State and local agencies and farm organizations in the control of water pollution from agricultural activities. The cost-sharing program, to be administered by USDA, will normally pay up to 50 per cent of the cost of instituting needed pollution control practices identified in an approved agriculture portion of a 208 plan.

Copies of the new agreement are available from the EPA Press Office (A-107), Room 329 West Tower, 401 M. Street, SW., Washington, D.C. 20460, telephone (202) 755-0344.

Loan guarantee plan likely

CHICAOG, Ill. – The Farmers Home Administration soon is likely to implement a loan guarantee plan for families above the moderate-income level, an assistant to the secretary of the Department of Agriculture recently told realtors attending the annual May meetings in Chicago.

Speaking to members of the Farm and Land Institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Realtors, Larry Meyers predicted that FmHA will fund such a program for loans to those in the $15,000 to $20,000 income range, although eligible income levels likely will vary across the nation.

Meyers also outlined FmHA's program for encouraging increased energy conservation among homeowners. The agency has developed energy-efficiency standards for homes in communities of 20,000 or less outside metropolitan areas, he said. It also has studied the possibility of requiring that all homes financed by FmHA after 1980 have an alternative energy source, he added.

"The feasibility of this will depend on the state of the art and costs of alternative energy sources, of course," Meyers said.

Meyers also outlined FmHA's program of making business and industrial loans for projects which promote employment in rural areas. The agency currently is funding construction of an airport, a port, and nickel mines through this program.

In discussion following Meyer's talk, Realtors expressed concern that the FmHA program of making business and industrial loans duplicated efforts of other government agencies such as the Small Business Administration, diverting FmHA resources from programs that had a more direct impact on farmers.

WHAT'S NEW

V—PLOWS

Bush Hog's new V-plow subsoiler has 32 inch shanks that provide greater trash clearance, the manufacturer says. The new longer shanks feature a special design engineered by Bush Hog's research and development center to help farmers cover more acreage faster and use less fuel.

A primary tillage tool, the Bush Hog V-plow breaks up hardpan and leaves a rough surface with some crop residue after plowing to help fight wind and water erosion.

The new V-plow subsoilers feature a rugged tubular steel tool bar for heaviest plowing The three-point hitches are adaptable for a Category III quick coupler. Both depth and level are easily adjustable. Shanks have shear pins to prevent damage from obstructions and replaceable points. The V-plow is available in six models with three to 11 shanks.

$33 million paid for emergency feed loans

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture provided approximately $33 million during March to help U.S. livestock producers buy feed under the emergency feed program.

Emergency feed program activity in Pennsylvania from Oct. 1, 1977 to March 31, 1978 shows that 548 loans were approved in the Keystone State for the purchase of nearly 39 million pounds of feed.

The emergency loans were made due to drought, flooding, and severe Winter weather in parts of Pennsylvania.

All tolled, payments were made to 46 of the 50 states during the 6-month period.

USDA assistance for the first six months of the program – Oct. 1 through March 31 -- totaled $95,976,045, according to Ray Fitzgerald, administrator of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. During the 6-month period, 94,231 applications were approved to help producers purchase up to 10.4 billion pounds of feed (185.6 million bushels, corn equivalent).

Under the emergency feed program, the secretary of agriculture may authorize financial aid to farmers when their livestock are threatened by conditions brought on by a natural disaster. Participants may be reimbursed up to 50 per cent of the cost of feed purchased during the emergency period. This, however, may not exceed 2 cents per pound in terms of feed grain equivalent.

Dairy promotion plan approved

NEW YORK – A plan whereby dairy farmers contribute money for milk promotion activities of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council of New York, Inc., was again approved this week by Thomas A. Wilson, market administrator, New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area. These milk promotion activities include advertising, nutrition education, publicity for dairy products, marketing and product research, and informational services.

Noting that New York State has a mandatory milk promotion plan, the Market Administrator stated that no dairy farmer will be subject to deduction under this program if he is making mandatory contributions under a state plan.

Wilson said that this week's action allows handlers regulated by the marketing orders to send "positive letters" to their dairy farmer suppliers.

A dairy farmer who receives a letter will be considered to approve for one year deductions of five cents per hundredweight from his monthly milk checks, unless he notifies his handler in writing that no deduction should be made.

Money deducted from payments for milk delivered on or after June 1 will be paid directly by the handler to the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council of New York, Inc.

The market administrator explained that participation is voluntary for both handlers and producers and a participating producer may have deductions stopped at any time by notifying his handler. A producer who does not want to participate and who receives no letter need not notify his handler since no deductions will be made.

In approving the plan for the coming year, Wilson pointed out that there has been no substantial opposition to the use of the positive letter procedure by producers.

Use of the positive letter approach was requested by Dairylea Cooperative Inc., Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative Association, Inc., and Northeast Dairy Cooperative Federation, Inc.

PEIA fact finding conference set

ARLINGTON, Va. – "Exploring the Future" has been chosen as the theme for the Poultry and Egg Institute of America's 49th Annual Fact Finding Conference September 12-15, 1978.

In making the announcement, PEIA President Don C. Beaver commented that "Exploring the Future" is particularly appropriate due to the location of this year's conference, Houston, Texas. "What better setting could be provided for 'exploring the future' than 'Space City U.S.A.' - Houston, which serves as home for the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, the focal point and nerve center for our nation's space exploration efforts," Beaver said.

"More importantly," he continued, "at this year's conference, industrymen and women will be offered a revealing and challenging glimpse into the future of the poultry and egg industry - its problems, opportunities, capacity for profits - today and in the future. We can think of no better concept on which to base this year's Fact Finding activities." Over 4,000 executives representing the leadership of the world's poultry industry are expected to attend Fact Finding, which has consistently been the premier event for the industry since it began back in 1919.

The world's finest production and processing equipment and services will be features at this market showplace for the industry. All exhibits and educational sessions will be held at the new Albert Thomas Convention and Exhibit Center located in the heart of downtown Houston. The beaufiful Hyatt Regency and Sheraton Houston hotels will serve as co-headquarters for the conference, along with five other hotels in the downtown area which will be used to house the thousands who are expected to converge on Houston for the event.

Farm Bureau opposes creation of nutrition council

WASHINGTON, D.C., – The American Farm Bureau Federation this week urged the House Agriculture Committee to reject proposals for a new Nutrition Council and instead spend the money on research and education.

Creation of the council is proposed in a newly introduced House bill (H.R. 11761).

John Datt, director of the Washington office of Farm Bureau, reminded members of the committee that the Secretary of Agriculture already has adequate authority to provide pertinent nutrition information and training through the Cooperative Extension Service and other USDA programs.

Datt said USDA has adequately demonstrated its concern for nutrition and consumer interests by appointment of a strong consumer advocate as Assistant Secretary for Food and Consumer Service; extensive discussion of nutrition programs and problems at the 1978 Outlook Conference; and the appointment of a USDA nutrition policy coordinating group.

Welsh Mt. clinic facility to be dedicated today

NEW HOLLAND -- Dedication of a new facility at the Welsh Mountain Medical Center, New Holland R2, will be held today (May 13) from 1 to 4 p.m. An open house will also be held, with tours of the clinic available.

The Board of Directors of the Center and three of its volunteers will be honored during the dedication with the Lancaster County Medical Society's Benjamin Rush Awards which are presented annually as a tribute to voluntary organizations for outstanding service in health care. These award winners have been nominated for the state award to be presented by the Pennsylvania Medical Society.

Individual awards will be given to Daniel Allen, former Board president; Doris Weaver, the Center's first nurse and director; and Isaac Boots, a local resident who first recognized the need for a permanent full-service facility in the Welsh Mountains and worked toward that goal.

A fund-raising program during the last year brought in half the funds needed to pay for the new building. With this building program, the Center's facilities currently serve over 500 patients a month, and offers a full range of health care. It also offers on-call services of a physician or nurse-practioner on a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week basis.

Beginning in July the staff will include two full-time physicians, a nurse-practioner and a full-time dentist.

Members of Lancaster County's Farm Women Society's are extended a special invitation to participate in the dedication and the open house, and all members of the community are welcome. Lancaster County's Farm Women recently voted to donate funds to the dental unit as their county project.
